Roosevelt Relief Bill Passes House In Test Vote

Leaders Regret Slashes in $1,500,000,000 Aid Measure.

Two New Dealers Head Fight for Cut

Final Action Expected Monday; Hopkins Asks for Legislation.

By Robert C. Albright.

The House yesterday voted $1,500,000,000 to provide work relief for 1,700,000 needy in 1938.

Approval came on a 210 to 128 teller vote, following flat refusal of the House to slash the amount, and wholesale smothering of amendments designed to increase it.

Final action on the measure was deferred until Monday, after leaders found themselves unable to complete consideration in one day, and ordered a week-end adjournment.

Yesterday's teller vote, still subject to final approval, backed up the President's budget message recommendation for a $1,500,000,000 lump sum.

Hopkins Makes Appeal.

To stiffen the backs of faltering members, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins went to the Capitol yesterday and addressed an informal meeting of Representative Pat Boland's whip organization.

Leadership pressure to hold relief to the budget figure was exerted after two of the staunchest House Roosevelt supporters, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, and Representative Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, broke from the reservation in favor of a slash.

An amendment by McReynolds to cut the appropriation to $1,200,000,000 failed only by a narrow margin, after Woodrum demanded a "halt" in relief spending, and McReynolds called it a racket. The McReynolds amendment was defeated, 182 to 154.

"If you cannot express yourselves and vote your convictions, then you ought to go home and stay there," McReynolds admonished members. "It has to stop. It is a racket."

Cannon Leads Fight.

Representative Clarence Cannon, Missouri Democrat and ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, led the fight for the full $1,500,000,000.

Cannon insisted this was the President's own figure, and declared there would be a "day of reckoning at the hands of the folk back home" for members failing to vote for the full amount.

Surviving the storm of "liberal" shouts for an even larger appropriation was a committee amendment by Woodrum, requiring Hopkins to apportion the $1,500,000,000 over all 12 months of the year, discouraging a relief deficiency.

Woodrum believes in the end this may save more than one-third cut in the bill, as WPA in past years always has incurred large deficiencies. One attempt to substitute "seven" for "twelve" months, and another to provide leeway for flood and drought emergencies, were shouted down following the Virginian's appeal.

Cuts Held Unlikely.

Remaining to be voted on is the House apporpriations sub-committee recommendation for only a $1,000,000,000 appropriations. The full committee rejected this, and recommended $500,000,000 more. The committee amendment will be finally voted on Monday, but yesterday's preliminary test was believed to assure the full amount.

The $1,500,000,000 figure approved by the House earmarks $630,000,000 for construction projects and recreational work; $415,000,000 for highways and streets; $380,000,000 for white-collar projects, and $75,000,000 for the National Youth Administration.

Both sides in the good-humored but noisy fight to slash the bill claimed White House sympathy. Leaders stood on the budget figure, but the economy crusaders claimed

Many a veteran of the Philippine Insurrection, reading of High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's "cocktail ukase" in Manila, must have been humming that old favorite of the Military Order of the Carabao last night. If they were, a striking historical coincidence was the cause.

Written to commemorate a remark attributed to Gen. Arthur MacArthur, father of the present special adviser to the Philippine Commonwealth, the song has a history that goes back to 1900.

But there were those in Washington last night who thought that, by substituting a name in the last line of the chorus, it might be brought up to date, as follows:

That, in effect, was the question that High Commissioner McNutt

Bilbao Women Slain by Guns Of Rebel Fliers

Bombers Strafe Streets After Loyal Planes Attack Lines.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, May 21.—Rebel warplanes swept upon Bilbao tonight, machine-gunning and killing many Basque women as they huddled in groups outside food shops, frontier dispatches said.

Basques charged that scores of black-winged German Heinkels suddenly appeared over Bilbao after a squadron of Russian-made loyalist planes from Santander bombed and strafed rebel troops around Munguia Heights, 7 miles northeast of the capital.

The rebel planes, according to the Basques, first bombed the shattered capital, then swooped low over the crowded streets and riddled lines of women obtaining their nightly distribution of food.

The attack came after loyalist planes raked the rebel lines without opposition. Then they disappeared toward Santander.

The rebel air raid was the first reported machine-gun attack on Bilbao since the six-week siege began.

A Basque communique said that rebel Gen. Emilio Mola lost 50,000 dead and wounded since the start of his drive on Bilbao. Five thousand casualties were reported on the Solluve Heights.

A regiment of Asturian cavalry, used for the first time in northern Spain, was wiped out in a charge against strong insurgent entrenchments at Una and Marana on the ### German Police Hunting Suspects Who Aided Mundelein.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 21.—The German secret police is seeking suspects who may have given George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago information for his anti-Nazi speech and who under German law could be charged with treason.

Death from the executioner's ax is the penalty upon conviction.

Foreign observers believed, however, that retaliation would be directed against religious organizations rather than individuals if there is evidence that information was supplied from German sources.

Government's Stand.

Cardinal Mundelein in a Chicago speech Tuesday said the German government was inspiring stories of wholesale immorality among priests and lay brothers in monasteries "in comparison with which the wartime propaganda is almost like bedtime stories."

The government contends open trial and conviction of the churchmen established proof of the immorality, and that reports to the contrary are falsifications.

Published accounts attributed to American newspapers related that the cardinal supposedly obtained his data on the immorality trials from German residents. The information allegedly was relayed through the Franciscan Sisters in Illinois.

The controlled German press in vigorous language made much of the situation today.

Crimes Widespread.

"It probably never occurred to him (Cardinal Mundelein) that he was uncovering a case of treason" involving "false information about important decisions to the state," the newspaper Nachtausgabe commented.

"Representatives of lay orders who sent the false information to the United States know full well the extent of sex crimes among the Franciscans. They know also that the sentences were inflicted only on the grounds of confessions by guilty lay brothers. They, therefore, have deliberately transmitted false reports to foreign countries for pursieged Bilbao.

Pretty Girl Traps U. S. Agent In Reno, Nev., Narcotic Drive

A special Treasury squad has smashed a narcotic ring in Reno, Nev., arresting nine men, one of them a Federal narcotic agent, and giving credit to a young woman who was visiting friends at the Nevada capital, it was learned yesterday.

The woman was Miss Joyce McAlister, Santa Barbara, Calif., college student, who gave evidence of the "shocking" conditions she observed at Reno and who co-operated with agents in making purchases of opium from the suspects.

The Associated Press quoted the woman as saying, "I saw youngsters, boys and girls of college age, scraping together dollars to buy dope. That made me make up my mind that I was going to smash the narcotic ring."

Treasury officials suspended Chris Hansen, the Federal agent, when he was arrested on charges of conspiracy to violate the Harrison anti-narcotic act. He was also charged with sale and possession and his bail set at $5,000, the Associated Press reported.

A. V. McAvoy, described as the leader of the group, and seven Chinese also are in custody. The Chinese and the amount of their bail are Woo Sing and Woo Suey Wing, $10,000 each; Yow Woo, $3,000; Yee Fong, Harry Chee, Jim Woo and William Woo, $2,000 each.

White House Denies Choice Of Robinson

President Says Question of Court Vacancy Not Considered.

Senate Majority Leader Fight Complicated by Harrison.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had given no thought to the appointment of Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, to the Supreme Court vacancy created by retirement of Justice Willis F. Van Devanter.

Senate leaders, undeterred by the statement, continued aligning themselves in three camps behind a trio of candidates for the post Robinson has not yet left—the majority leadership.

Back into the race came Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, not willingly, it was understood, but at insistence of friends. Harrison earlier virtually had declared himself out of the coming combat, but yesterday was learned to be "still in a very receptive mood."

Byrnes, Barkley in Race.

Harrison's re-entry brought two other considerations to the fore at once. The other two candidates are Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Assistant Floor Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky.

Byrnes, a close friend of the President, almost certainly will withdraw from the race if Harrison decides to seek the post, some of his friends stated. If Harrison remains out, however, Byrnes likely will do battle for the position, with its power and prestige.

The second consideration brought deep furrows into Administration brows. If Harrison should seek and win the majority leadership, he would almost certainly withdraw from his major committee assignment as chairman of the powerful, important Finance Committee.

The chairmanship then, by all rights of seniority, automatically would become the property of Senator William H. King, of Utah, one of the most vigorous foes of most aspects of the New Deal that there is in the Senate.

King New Deal Foe.

Since all tax legislation, of any type, from the soldiers' bonus to the social security act, from income tax bills to the latest, the undistributed surplus profits tax law, originates in this committee, the Administration naturally seeks as little opposition from the chairman as possible. King, a grim and implacable enemy of many Administration ideas, would be a far cry from Harrison, completely amiable to the New Deal.

This talk had gone so far yesterday that there was considerable discussion over the possibility of Harrison retaining this chairmanship while serving as majority leader, with Byrnes and Barkley as assistant leaders.

The mere fact that such a discussion was being pursued showed how far some Senators were going on the strength of three consecutive "ifs." If Robinson were named to the court, if Harrison should actively seek the leadership, and if Harrison got the leadership—then King would be Finance Committee chairman, was the reasoning process.

Five of Virginia's eight Representatives and one Senator, Harry F. Byrd, signed a letter yesterday indorsing Robinson for the Supreme Court appointment and turned it over to Representative Fuller (Democrat), Arkansas. Representative A Willis Robertson (Democrat), Vir-

By the Associated Press.

McReynolds was getting a haircut in the Supreme Court barber shop when he noticed a glum expression on the face of John G. Warner, the shoeshine boy.

"What's the matter, son?" the justice inquired.

"Oh, he's worried because he doesn't know whether he'll get enough dimes today to go to the circus," the barber explained.

The justice reached into his pocket and gave the boy a dollar bill.

"If you'll get in the lion's cage and look the lion straight in the eye I'll give you $5 more," McReynolds said.

Yesterday the bootblack recounted his experiences.

"I saw the trapeze act, the elephants, the lions and everything," he said. "But I didn't go into the lion's cage; no, suh!"

An attempt to pin a Communist label upon John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization was made last night by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a radio speech entitled "Where Does Labor Stand?"

"In the light of this information," Green roared into a Columbia Broadcasting System microphone, after reading a dispatch from Moscow, "no person in the United States need be deceived regarding the real cause of the split and the division which has occurred within the ranks of labor * * *"

Parley Refused By Sit-Downers In Illinois Mine

457 Union Men Prepare for Long Siege; Claim Mules Better Treated.

By the Associated Press.

Gillespie, Ill., May 21.—The president of the Superior Coal Co. today offered to discuss settlement of a sit-down strike of approximately 500 men in the depths of one of the company's mines but the strikers prepared cheerfully for a long siege.

Amply provisioned, supplied with blankets and a variety of musical instruments, they sang, played cards, read and ate 360 feet below the surface of No. 4 mine at nearby Wilsonville.

Offers to Meet Group.

A spokesman asserted they would not come up until their demands are met. There are two demands—that work be shared with 300 idle miners, and that a stop be put to mechanization of the workings, thus jeopardizing jobs of many miners. But the "share-the-work" demand was predominant.

F. S. Pfahler, of Chicago, president of the coal company, issued this statement:

"Of the 556 men who worked in No. 4 mine yesterday there remain today 457 who are down below on what they call a sit-down strike. No demands have been officially made on any officers of the company. No negotiations so far have been carried on concerning any settlement, except that I have offered to meet a committee of the would-be sit-downers at any time they choose. But at the present time they have not accepted this offer.

Mule Welfare Cared For.

"We have no intentions of using force to get the miners out of the mine. We do not intend to operate the mines for some time to come nor do we intend to interfere with the food supply being sent down to the men. We have no present intention of stopping the fans which furnish fresh air to the men. We are pulling the fires under most of the boilers, but leaving sufficient boilers to maintain steam to keep the mines properly ventilated and the pumps operating."

Joe Ozanic, national president of the Progressive Miners Union, declared the demonstration was unauthorized. John Fisher, president of Local Union No. 1, said the executive board of the local was behind the strike and admitted he had not discussed the strike with Ozanic. The strike began late yesterday.

New NRA Bill Awaits Word By Roosevelt

Measure Calls for 35-40 Hour Week, $16 Basic Pay, Child Labor Ban.

By William V. Neely.

The Administration's long-anticipated wage and hour legislation was reported ready for introduction last night, awaiting receipt by Congress of President Roosevelt's message on the subject, expected Tuesday or Wednesday.

Provisions for a work week varying from 35 to 40 hours, a $16-a-week basic minimum wage, and a ban on products of labor of children under 16 years of age were said to be included, but regulation of trade practices, included in the old NRA was omitted.

A label or stamp, reminiscent of but not strikingly similar to the Blue Eagle of NRA days, would be placed on goods affected to show they had been produced in conformity with the act, it was reported.

A three-man commission to administer the act would be created.

Service industries, such as garages and dry cleaners, are to be exempt, it is understood, along with firms or individuals employing less than 20 persons.

Firms engaged in interstate commerce or in business affecting such interstate commerce would be subject to provisions of the bill.

Chairman William P. Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, of the House Labor Committee was expected to introduce the bill within 24 hours after the President's message is received and read.

Mrs. Loper's Testimony Fails To Hint Clew in Keene Death

Mystery surrounding the disappearance of Charles F. Keene was just as deep last night despite the surprise appearance of Mrs. R. F. Loper at a hearing here yesterday. The body and a motive was still unfound, and charges off "falsity" in the testimony were heard.

Mrs. Loper, occupant of the stateroom adjoining Keene's the night of May 13 when he vanished from the steamer District of Columbia had been sought for a week. She testified she heard no commotion and explained she had not come forward to tell what she knew because she was unaware police wished to question her.

It was the first time such a hearing has been held in the Commerce Department in the Washington area, and came about because of the law passed about a year ago providing for more intensive inquiries into loss of life at sea and on the waterways.

Such hearings have been held elsewhere in the country, however. The death of Keeene, it was pointed out, was the first case of its kind here.

Detective J. J. Cassidy threw the hearing into an uproar yesterday when he jumped to his feet and stated: "There are many conflicting stories in this case. I would like to tell the court what I have discovered." J. Frank Staley, presiding, instructed the officer to make

First Aerial Ground Party Will Explore World's Top

Field Prepared for Four Other Planes; Air Base to Be Established.

Quartet to Spend Year on Ice Floe

Station to Be Halfway Point Along Sky Route to San Francisco.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 21.—Daring Soviet aviators today carried the first aerial landing party to the North Pole. An expedition of 11 men, having flown over the Pole, was landed safely on an ice floe about 20 kilometers (13 miles) from the top of the world.

The expedition was headed by Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, the picturesquely bewhiskered director of the Soviet's "Northern Sea Route," leader and planner of many ambitious Arctic projects.

The flight was made from Rudolph Island, about 82 degrees north and 60 east, about 560 miles from the Pole.

The successful landing brought to a successful climax years of preparation by Soviet scientists and airmen looking toward establishment of an air base at the North Pole and an ambitious program of polar exploration by airplane.

M. V. Vodopyanoff was pilot of the plane. He took his heavily loaded four-motored craft off the new landing field at Rudolph Island at dawn. The landing was six hours ten minutes later.

Plane Circles Pole.

Before coming down, the airplane circled the Pole many times looking for a landing field.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, announced the Pole was reached at 11:10 a. m. and the landing made at 11:35 a. m., at the time of the meridian of Rudolph Island. (That would make the time about 2:10 a. m. and 2:35 a. m. Eastern Standard Time.)

Immediately after landing the party began preparing a landing field for four other airplanes still waiting at the Rudolph Island base.

They are to take to the Pole supplies and equipment for the establishment of a base, which will remain there for about one year.

The Soviet aviators, by flying over the Pole, duplicated the feat of Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd, who reached the top of the world by air May 9, 1926.

Lincoln Ellsworth, American explorer, Norwegian Capt. Roald Amundsen and the Italian flier, Umberto Nobile, were aboard the dirigible Norse, which crossed over the North Pole May 13, 1926.

News Told by Radio.

Fourteen other men were aboard with Ellsworth, Amundsen and Nobile on the Norge's flight.

News of today's exploit reached Moscow by radio messages relayed through Rudolph Island.

It was delayed, however, because Vodopyanoff's radio apparatus was broken in the landing, and repairs required several hours.

Vodopyanoff was one of three Soviet airmen who spent more than a month last year in aerial surveys of the Arctic in preparation for today's adventure.

The other two, Vasily Sergeyevitch Molokoff and Alexander Alexieff, accompanied him to Rudolph Island several weeks ago and presumably were on this flight.

The news came in a radioed dispatch from Prof. Schmidt to Joseph Stalin and Premier V. M. Molotoff, which read:

"We send you, through the Dickson Island radio station, greetings from the North Pole.

"Aboard the Soviet plane U. S. S. R. N-170 we crossed the pole at 11:10 Friday morning. In order to obtain the best results we passed a little beyond the pole seeking a landing field.

"We first crossed the pole at 1,750 meters and then came down to 250

ginia, sponsored the unprecedented communication.

A report had it Vincent M. Miles, member of the Social Security Board, was being seriously considered by Gov. J. M. Futrell of Arkansas for appointment to the Senate to fill the vacancy to arise if Robinson is appointed to the court.

The President's court reorganization bill, meanwhile, continued dormant in a sub-committee of three selected from the ten members of the Judiciary Committee who voted it down last Tuesday.

The three, Senators King, Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Pat McCarran, of Nevada, all Democrats, expect to have the report completed by next week-end, with the bill to arrive on the Senate calendar the following week.

The court bill itself scarcely figured in the wide-open Senate discussions of the possibility of Robinson's nomination to the court and the consequences. The only question appeared to be whether the President would be allowed one or two additions to the Supreme Court—if any.

Leadership Chief Topic.

The leadership question remained the talk of the hour. According to Senators who preferred not to be quoted but were keenly interested, it involves far more momentous matters than the mere leadership job.

The 1940 Presidential election, the future of the Democratic Party, the future course of the Senate in regard to the leadership of the President and the future of the New Deal are all said to be part of the picture.

One aggressive liberal Senator outlined the situation as follows:

"This matter cuts clean to the core of the party's troubles. The court issue is mere top soil over the roots. Is the Democratic Party going to go conservative with Southern leadership or remain liberal—that's the issue.

"Barkley and Harrison are party wheelhorses. They'll go along with the Administration. They're really conservative at heart, however.

Byrnes Declared Best.

"Byrnes, if anything, is more conservative than they are, but he's also more of a natural leader than they are. You know where you stand with Jimmy Byrnes.

"The Senate's really in revolt right now and nobody realizes it. They've stood up the President at last—on the court bill—and they've tasted blood. What's more, anybody else the President nominates—other than Joe Robinson—will be fought tooth and nail before he's confirmed. The President knows that, too."

Other Senators balked at this outline of affairs as prejudiced and inaccurate when told of it, and several pointed out that not merely the conservatives in the Senate were for Robinson's promotion but the entire Senate to a man, Republicans, Democrats, Progressives and Farmer-Laborites. Administration men insisted also that Robinson is a New Dealer at heart, and that his appointment to the court would really be "an infusion of new thought."

Relief Bill Passes House in Test Vote

the $1,500,000,000 amendment actually was more than the President asked for, since it reappropriated an additional $223,000,000 in unexpended balances.

Yesterday's vote shifted the battle to cut the bill to the Senate, where another Administration stalwart is leading the drive for a $1,000,000,000 limitation—Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina. Byrnes reputedly has the backing of Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson.

Before the final House vote on the relief bill next Monday, another skirmish is scheduled over an attempt to earmark $300,000,000 of the relief appropriation for PWA. The House PWA bloc has lined up behind Representative Alfred F. Beiter, (Democrat), of New York, for the Ickes earmarking, but Hopkins contends he requires the full amount for WPA.

Every attempt yesterday to bolster the relief figure above the $1,500,000,000 total was crushed by the Democratic machine, and the efforts were legion. The parade of amendments to increase the amount were led off by Representative Gerald Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, who asked $3,000,000,000. He was defeated, 196 to 51. Representative Usher L. Burdick (Republican), North Dakota, even asked $4,000,000,000, but his amendment went down under a thunder of "Noes."

Other Amendments.

Other amendments overwhelmingly defeated were:

Representative Dewey W. Johnson (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, $2,900,000,000.

Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, $3,200,000,000.

Representative Frank E. Hook (Democrat), Michigan, $2,629,000,000.

Representative H. Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), Calif., $2,200,000,000.

President's Court Reorganization Program Is Poorly Drafted; Might Abolish Tribunal.

By Franklyn Waltman

SO intense has been the fight over the principle involved in President Roosevelt's judiciary reorganization program that the bill which he sent to Congress to achieve his objective has been generally overlooked.

WALTMAN.

Entirely aside from the fundamental principle involved—that is, establishment of the precedent that a President is entitled to a sympathetic Supreme Court—the bill itself is as bad a piece of legislative drafting as any seen on Capitol Hill in recent years. With only one change of any importance that bill now has been adversely reported to the Senate.

So badly is the bill drafted that at least one outstanding lawyer and constitutional authority on Capitol Hill has been led to question whether the measure, in its present form, would not eventually provide for the abolition of the Supreme Court. This Senator, William E. Borah, did in questioning Attorney General Homer S. Cummings when the latter was before the Senate Judiciary Committee some weeks ago.

The situation, briefly, is:

Although the Constitution provides for "one Supreme Court," it left to Congress the right to specify the number of justices who comprise the high tribunal and other details of their service, except that the judges appointed could not be removed except by impeachment for misbehavior, and and that their compensation could not be diminished during their continuance in office.

The present size of the Supreme Court was established by an act of Congress in 1869 which provided that "the Supreme Court of the United States shall consist of a Chief Justice and eight associate justices, any six of whom shall constitute a quorum."

It would appear that the easiest way to increase the size of the court would be to amend the act of 1869 by, say, striking out the word eight and inserting in lieu thereof the word 12, or 14 or 15, or whatever number might be regarded as desirable.

But the President's bill does not do this. Without making any reference whatever to the act of 1869 it prescribes in essence a formula for appointment of additional judges, based on the number of incumbents over 70 years of age, who have not retired or resigned within 30 days after the passage of the President's bill. Since there are now, including Justice Van Devanter, six such judges on the court, the bill provides for six additional judges and sets 15 as the permanent number of justices on the Court.

Incidentally, since Justice Van Devanter has announced his retirement, Mr. Roosevelt now would be able to increase the court's size only to 14 as his bill stands. But he or his successor would be required, under the bill, to name the fifteenth justice in the fall of 1942 if Justice Cardozo had not previously retired. This is an aspect of the bill overlooked.

But to get back to the bill itself. Although it prescribes that the new size of the Supreme Court shall be permanently whatever number is reached by application of the age formula, but not more than 15, it also provides that "no additional judge shall be appointed hereunder if the judge who is of retirement age dies, resigns or retires prior to the nomination of such additional judge."

If this proviso is read in conjunction with a sub-section on the next page of the bill, which states that "an additional judge shall not be appointed under the provisions of this section when the judge who is of retirement age is commissioned to an office as to which Congress has provided that a vacancy shall not be filled," the question is raised, by the ambiguity of the language, whether any vacancy would exist on retirement, resignation or death of a Supreme Court justice. Thus if no vacancy existed, the President could not make an appointment and the possibility exists that the Court would be abolished by attrition in the absence of new legislation.

Attorney General Cummings does not believe this line of reasoning is valid, because he does not believe the act of 1869 is repealed by the new legislation. Senator Borah maintains that even though the statute of 1869 is not repealed, it is being amended by implication and he asked the Attorney General whether he did not think it should be specifically amended, as suggested above.

"That would have to do with the question of the mechanics of the particular bill," Mr. Cummings replied. "I honestly do not think so. Still, in event a serious objection is made, it might be done."

"It seems to me it comes very near to abolishing the Supreme Court," rejoined Senator Borah.

Whether the phraseology of the bill would have such an effect at least is a matter of doubt and it is hardly wise to proceed in so uncertain a manner in such a serious matter. Senator M. M. Logan, apparently, has some doubts on this point for in his proposed compromise he undertook directly to amend the 1869 statute and so did Senator William G. McAdoo, in his proposed compromise. Both are excellent lawyers.

Leaving that question, it also may be pointed out that the Senate Judiciary Committee made one substantial change in the President's bill. Originally that measure provided that all circuit and district judges "hereafter appointed" would be subject to assignment at the discretion of the Chief Justice to circuits and districts around the country outside of the one to which they were appointed. Thus when they accepted appointment it would be subject to the understanding that they might become roving judges.

But the committee struck out the phrase "hereafter appointed" and authorized the Chief Justice to assign judges now sitting to duty in any circuit and district in the country. In the hands of a Chief Justice subservient to the party in power, this authority is a potent weapon for forcing off the bench judges distasteful to the President or his Administration.

Indeed, the authority to shift judges from one district to another, as well as the authority to recall judges who voluntarily have retired, opens the way for serious abuses, for the power to shift and recall judges easily might be used to control decisions.

Another apparent legislative snake in the bill, which does not seem to have occurred to any Senators, is that the President need not seek the "advice and consent of the Senate" in his appointment of a successor to any judge of an inferior court who voluntarily retires under the terms of the retirement act.

The Constitution requires Senatorial confirmation only for ambassadors, public ministers and consuls, and judges of the Supreme Court. It authorizes Congress by law to vest "the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments." Thus it is constitutional for Congress to vest in the President alone authority to name circuit and district judges, and this, in the matter of successors to district and circuit judges who retire, Congress unwittingly has done.

Secretary Hull Begins Shakeup In Department

Latin-American, Mexican Divisions Merged; Welles' Post to Be Filled.

A reorganization of personnel in the State Department is contemplated by Secretary Hull, it was revealed at the department yesterday.

As a first step the Secretary announced consolidation of the division of Latin-American affairs and the division of Mexican affairs into a new division of American republics.

The swearing in of Sumner Welles as Undersecretary of State and of R. Walton Moore as counselor of the department yesterday also marked the start of the reorganization. Both Welles and Moore had been serving as assistant secretaries. The assistantship held by Moore is being abolished, leaving one position, of assistant secretary, that formerly held by Welles, to be filled.

Laurance Duggan, who has been chief of the Latin-American division, will be chief of the new American republics division. He will have as assistants Willard L. Beaulac and Donold R. Heath, who have been his assistants heretofore, and Richard C. Tanis, former assistant chief of the Mexican affairs division.

Edward L. Reed, formerly head of the Mexican division, has been transferred to the position of counselor of the embassy at Rome.

The State Department reorganization follows a similar one in the foreign service, which Secretary Hull said yesterday has resulted in the dropping of some 50 foreign service officers. The shakeup has been in progress for two years.

At the same time, the Secretary of State defended officers in the service who are sometimes derisively referred to as "cookie-pushers" and "bespatted high-hat boys."

When serving in such danger spots as Madrid, Valencia or Addis Ababa in times of stress, the Secretary said, such officers always give a good account of themselves.

Cummings to Ask Fund to Retain 55

In an attempt to forestall immediate dismissal of 55 special attorneys in the Department of Justice, necessitated by lack of funds, Attorney General Homer Cummings will ask Congress to appropriate $60,000 for salaries and expenses until July 1.

The Attorney General did not reveal whether he would go personally to the Capitol or send department officials. He did reveal through a spokesman, however, that an appropriations sub-committee next week would be asked to insert a $40,000 item in the pending third deficiency bill. The item was stricken from another measure by a conference committee last Wednesday.

If the $40,000 is approved, Cummings estimated it will be necessary to dismiss or furlough only 14 of the department's 103 special assistants. Otherwise, he estimated, it will be necesary to make a 54 per cent pay cut for all special assistants or dismiss or furlough 55 attorneys.

Florida Canal Bill Approved By Committee

House Group's Action Called 'Gesture' by Opponents.

The $197,921,000 Florida ship canal bill yesterday was ordered favorably reported to the House by a 12 to 5 vote of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee.

The controversial project, for which Congress refused to appropriate any money last year, was approved following Administration activity at the Capitol in behalf of the measure.

Although a majority of the committee voted for the report, six of the 12 are understood to have reserved the right to oppose it on the floor.

Action Unlikely.

Opponents of the projected passage through the Florida peninsula insisted the report was little more than a "gesture" and no action is contemplated this session.

Chairman Joseph J. Mansfield of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee is not expected to go before the House Rules Committee for the rule required for House consideration. Nor will any appropriations be sought, it was said.

Action came on a report by Maj. Gen. Edward N. Markham, chief of Army Engineers, that an expenditure of $197,921,000 on the canal was justified.

He is understood to have recommended a canal depth of 33 feet and a width of 400 to 600 feet.

Before voting on the project, on which lengthy hearings were held, the committee decided to separate it from an omnibus rivers and harbors bill.

The rivers and harbors bill, authorizing $31,720,300 for some 119 projects, also was approved.

The Florida ship canal, like the Passamaquoddy "tide harnessing" project, a center of heated controversy in the last session of Congress, was started by the President in 1936 with a $5,400,000 relief allocation.

Modern American in Taste

The new Pall Mall follows the English blending method of the famous Turkish Pall Mall, ("A Shilling in London, A Quarter Here"). It is, however, made to please the modern American smoker, and sells at 15¢ for 20.

The straight tobacco flavour of Pall Mall, The Modern Blend, comes from a simple blend of fine domestic tobaccos, enriched by Oriental types. It is the only cigarette of its type without artificial flavouring or sugar-coating. As a result, one benefit it offers you is relief from the unpleasant after-taste of artificially sweetened cigarettes.

Church Group Moves to Ease Divorce Canon

Liberal Episcopalians Hold Remarriage Ban Must Undergo Change.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 21.—Headquarters of the Episcopal Church tonight reported "a considerable sentiment" had grown up within the church for liberalization of the marriage and divorce laws and predicted the issue would come before the general convention again when it holds its triennial meeting in Cincinnati next October.

The question is being debated at many diocesan conventions all over the country and the dioceses of Michigan and Missouri already have taken a stand in favor of easing the present restrictions against the remarriage of divorced persons.

The announcement also reported that a group of theological students attending the general seminary in New York had argued for a "broader treatment" of the question.

Others Oppose Change.

On the other hand, a group of churchmen centering about St. Martin's Church in Providence, R. I., had asked every Episcopal clergyman to sign a statement saying, in part:

"We firmly believe that, for Christian people, marriage after divorce is contrary to the law of our Lord Jesus Christ, as declared in the Gospel and revealed by the guidance of the Holy Ghost during the long life of the church.

"We recognize that some scholars think this prohibition does not apply to the innocent party in a divorce secured on the grounds of adultery, and, this matter being doubtful, we admit that there may be legitimate question about the right of the church to bless remarriage in such cases, but in no others.

"We deny that any authority in the Anglican communion has power to change by canon law or otherwise, the teaching of this matter as given by the Lord for the government of Christians."

Predicts Easing of Law.

Opposing the action of the Providence group, the announcement said, a Philadelphia clergyman, the Rev George C. Anderson, "defines the position of liberal churchmen, saying that the present canon must be eased and that the time is coming when it will be."

He says: "We need a new interpretation of the principle of marriage to replace that made in the Middle Ages. That which makes people miserable does not represent the teaching of Christ. * * * Our people usually will be remarried anyway, and so the canon is ineffectual in its severity."

At present the church laws require that no minister shall solemnize the marriage "of any person who has been or is the husband or the wife of any other person then living, from whom he or she had been divorced for any cause arising after marriage * * * but this canon shall not be held to apply to the innocent party in a divorce for adultery."

It is possible, under Episcopal Church law, to have marriages annulled by a bishop or an ecclesiastical court on certain grounds.

British Laborite Assails Princess Elizabeth Grant

Oxford, England, May 21 (AP).—James Maxton, fiery Laborite member of Parliament, in a political spech tonight attacked the Labor Party for supporting the recommendation of a grant of £6,000 ($30,000) a year to 11-year-old Princess Elizabeth, heiress presumptive to the throne.

"I have no doubt she's a sweet, charming lassie," said Maxton, a Scot and leader of the Independent Labor Party. "But the fact that in my constituency the child of an unemployed man gets only 3 shillings (72 cents) a week while its father gets 17 shillings ($4.08) is, to my mind, a complete contradiction of every scrap of decency."

Raskob Leaves Stand, Saying U. S. Is in Error

New York, May 21 (AP)—John J. Raskob stepped down today from the witness chair in the Government's suit to collect $617,316 in deficiency income tax from Pierre S. du Pont after testifying that the small difference between transactions in which he and du Pont swapped almost $30,000,000 was "natural."

However, he contended that the Government's chart showing cross-sales of stock between them was erroneous in at least one instance that would throw it out of balance around $50,000. Maintaining that the stock sales were made to establishe losses to escape taxes, the Government also seeks to collect $1,026-340 from Raskob.

Federal Agents Seize Man Here On Vice Charge

Edward Brinkley Arrested Under Mann Act on Girl's Testimony.

Federal operatives who recently engaged in swift, darting raids on vice dens in Baltimore early yesterday swung here to arrest a man who gave his name as Edward Brinkley on a charge of violating the Mann act.

The man is charged with conspiring to transport Caroline St. John, of Benson, N. C., from this city to Baltimore, on last August 25. The girl is one of the Government's key witnesses in the Baltimore vice inquiry.

The agents did not disclose the location where they arrested Brinkley. The warrant for his arrest was issued Thursday in Baltimore by United States Commissioner James K. Kullen. Simultaneously, F. B. I. operatives in the Maryland city were questioning two young women, Teddie Rogers, 26, of New York City, and Betty Lucas, 26, of Philadelphia. Both women were arrested in their home cities.

The arrest of Brinkley here brings the number of vice raid arrests to 56. The testimony of the St. John girl has brought about the suspension of a Baltimore police lieutenant and sergeant.

A Federal agent was en route from Baltimore to Washington yesterday to take charge of Brinkley.

Girl Tells Story Of Hatchet Murder

Jersey City, N. J., May 21 (AP).—Like a smiling girl graduate, 17-year-old Gladys MacKnight began in court today the story she hopes will save her from the electric chair for the hatchet slaying of her mother.

Adjournment cut short her testimony before she reached the point of the slaying, which her attorney asserted would be blamed upon her former red-haired sweetheart and co-defendant, Donald Wightman, 18.

French Insist on U. S. For Start of Air Race

The statement followed reports that Jimmy Mattern, globe-circling aviator, and Dick Merrill, of transatlantic fame, seeking to have the race start in Canada, had cabled Pierre Cot, French air minister, offering their aid. The race would be held to commemorate the Lindbergh flight ten years ago.

Philadelphia Police Get Week to 'Clean Up Vice'

'Admission' by Parker.

Newark, N. J., May 21 (AP).—An asserted admission by Detective Ellis H. Parker that he had no evidence against Paul H. Wendell in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping was repeated to a Federal Court today as the Government rested its case against Parker and his son in their trial for conspiracy in the Wendel abduction.

known his comments to the board privately after the public hearing.

Chief inconsistency in the testimony centered around Mrs. Loper. Charles F. Keene, jr., son of the missing man, indicated what Cassidy had in mind when he challenged the testimony of T. J. Shannon, pnrser. He referred to statements Mrs. Loper had called the boat company last Friday morning, which she denied yesterday.

"Would the court be interested in a falsity?" the son asked dramatically.

"Yes, it certainly would," replied Staley, an attorney in the Justice Department.

"Then recall Shannon to the stand," young Keene said.

Shannon, dapper black-haired purser, stepped forward.

"Do you recall a conversation with me last Saturday?" Keene inquired.

"I do."

Denied Mentioning Woman.

"Do you remember telling me that a Mrs. Loper occupied the room next to my father's? And do you remember saying to me 'By the way, she called the office in Norfolk. You might follow that up.'?"

"I do not recall saying any such thing to you," Shannon replied. The two men were standing only a foot apart, glaring at each other.

Keene and Shannon then exchanged several words which were lost in the loud orders of the presiding officer telling them to keep quiet.

J. M. Eby, refreshment-stand operator, added new evidence when he testified that the silent stranger who bought Keene a bottle of beer was a "red-faced man, who looked as though he might be an old soldier from the home." (He was referring to the Old Soldiers' Home near Old Point Comfort.)

Watchman Tells of Sound.

William Bowen, watchman, repeated what he had told detectives concerning a sound he heard in the night which might have been a pistol shot. Bowen was not asked to describe the sound, but he did state that it was loud enough to cause him to get up from his chair and inspect cabins in the after section of the promenade deck.

"It might have come from the outside of the ship," Bowen said. "It was muffled, but at the same time it was fairly loud. I looked around and saw the lights were out in all the rooms. I went out onto the open deck and looked, but saw nothing. No one was up or around the decks. It was at 1:45 a. m. I had just finished my rounds, punching the fire box stations."

Mrs. Loper, a gray-haired matron, was indignant that she had been described in the press as "a missing witness."

"There was no reason why I couldn't be located," she testified. "My name is in the Norfolk telephone book, but I never heard from anyone until I saw my name in the Norfolk papers. That was this week, Wednesday."

Saw Account in Paper.

Mrs. Loper said first accounts she had read in the newspapers did not mention Keene's stateroom number and that it was not until she saw her name that she realized the missing man was either murdered or committed suicide a few feet away from her.

"I am a very light sleeper," she stated. "The door was rattling a little and I got up and stuffed some paper in it so it wouldn't keep me awake. Before that there were some men outside the door playing some kind of game. They went away about 11 o'clock.

"I fell asleep then. I did not hear anything until next morning after 5, when I awoke, dressed and went out on deck. At home if there are any unusual noises I always hear them but I didn't hear a thing that night."

Norfolk Agent Not Present.

P. G. Minter, general agent for the line at Norfolk, failed to appear here yesterday, although young Keene and his lawyer, Richard Daniels, had requested that he be subpenaed in order to get his version of the mystery telephone call. J. Allen Riorden, general manager, explained that Minter had been excused by a Commerce Department official. The board said his testimony was wanted and Minter would be called at a subsequent hearing, no date for which has been set.

Upshot of yesterday's hearing was that much evidence already known was spread on the record and that the testimony of Mrs. Loper that she knew nothing of the mystery was at last obtained.

Coast Guard officials said they would continue their search for Keene's body for at least another week. A 75-foot shallow-draft cruiser has been nosing through marshes and inlets along the lower Potomac for almost a week in a vain search.

To Seek Clews in Norfolk.

Two Maryland State policemen, Sergt. Marlin Brubaker and Detective J. J. Cassidy were to go to Norfolk Sunday in a search for more evidence.

"I did not look for Mrs. Loper in Norfolk because I relied on Norfolk police to locate her," said Brubaker yesterday. "I took the word of the officers there that there was no such person in the city, which they told me."

Mrs. Loper said she telephoned Eugene C. Carlson, chief inspector of the Bureau of Navigation, when she read she was wanted. "He asked me if I would accept a subpena to testify and I said I would." She added she had come up to Washington a week ago Wednesday and returned Thursday. Her husband is a Navy Yard worker in Norfolk.

It was learned yesterday that Charles Keene, sr., owned a $1,500 traveling insurance policy, which covered him only in case of death while traveling. He bought the policy last August.

The Maryland detectives indicated they would investigate the "red-faced" man at Old Point Comfort. It is known that four men disembarked at that port, where the ship stopped for 30 minutes. It was also learned yesterday that every person on the vessel had a stateroom that night except one man. Usually numerous passengers sit up in the lounge all night.

Bowen, the watchman, in response to a question from the bench, gave as his opinion that it would be "very easy" for a person to climb over the rail on the after deck and make his way along a catwalk to Keene's stateroom, which was the last one aft. A handrail circles the ship above the catwalk.

Jurors Acquit Two Accused of SEC Violation

District Attorney May Not Try Third Man in Stock Sale Case.

After deliberating 18 hours, a jury in District Court yesterday acquitted Milton Janis, New York City stock salesman, and Harry E. Hanes, general manager of the Standard Appraisal Co., of New York, of the charge of making false statements in a registration statement filed in compliance with securities act of 1933.

The jury was locked up for the night on orders of Justice F. Dickinson Letts at 11 o'clock Thursday night. Shortly after noon yesterday, the jurors announced they had reached a verdict and within a few minutes both Janis and Hanes were being congratulated by friends.

The statements complained of were made in a registration of stock of the Continental Distillers & Importers Corporation. The statements involved the value and description of the company's property at Shrewsbury, Pa., where a distillery was to have been opened. The case was the first in the District where statements made in response to a required registration of stock was impugned. Defense Attorneys William E. Leahy, John J. Sirica, Richard Doyle and William J. Hughes, jr., were elated at the verdict.

Dan F. Reynolds, Washington lawyer, one of those indicted but not tried because of ill-health, may receive the benefit of a nolle prosse, although Government attorneys declared last night they had not finally made up their minds. He was not tried because two physicians stated his condition was such that a trial now would endanger his life.

David A. Pine, assistant United States attorney who prosecuted the case, said that about $40,000 of stock of the corporation had been sold.

Siam's Cholera Better But Hundreds Dying

Bangkok, Siam, May 21 (AP).—A cholera epidemic has swept Siam and hundreds are dying every week, but health authorities said today the situation is improving.

Officials statistics list 8,147 cases and 5,164 deaths since the epidemic started in January. The weekly death toll has dropped from 393 early in April to 250 now. Tourist traffic is affected considerably, with passengers from Siam quarantined when they reach neighboring ports.

Man Held Here On Bribe Count In Police Case

Accused of Offering $35 to Witness in Prince Georges Trial.

An indictment against Harry McK. Braxton, colored, of Lakeland, Md., who is charged with attempting to bribe one of the witnesses in the pending Prince Georges County conspiracy trials, will be sought immediately before the District grand jury, David Hart, Assistant United States District Attorney, said last night.

Hart said he would request that the preliminary hearing scheduled before the District Police Court today at 9:30 be continued so that the grand jury may begin an immediate study of the evidence against Braxton.

Meanwhile, in Prince Georges County, it was reported that a special session of the grand jury might be called to study evidence that one of the former county policemen, now under indictment for conspiracy to obstruct justice, was involved in the attempt to bribe the witness.

Braxton was said by police to have signed a statement implicating this police officer.

Arrest of Braxton occurred Thursday night. According to police, he came to the apartment of Charles Hamilton, colored, of 1433 T street northwest, allegedly to offer him a bribe of $35 if he would refuse to testify at the trials of men indicted in Prince Georges County last December at the close of an investigation into an alleged bonding conspiracy. The trials are expected to be held beginning June 7.

Also arrested was Myrtle Lewis, 35, of North Brentwood, Md. At Washington police headquarters she was booked as a United States witness.

At a conference yesterday, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Washington police superintendent, promised to cooperate with Prince Georges County officials in frustrating attempts to bribe key witnesses in the coming trials. Most of the witnesses are Washington motorists who claim they were victimized in an alleged graft ring.

2 Hitchhikers Held In Girl's Murder

Onida, S. Dak., May 21 (AP).—Miss Ada Carey, 26, died in a hospital here today shortly after Sheriff Jack Reedy said she had identified two teen age Chicago youths as the hitchhikers who shot her this morning after she had given them a ride.

The youths, arrested while hiding in weeds near a deserted farm house, told Sheriff Reedy they were Norman Westberg, 17, and Howard Christenson, 16, of Chicago. Reedy quoted them as admitting the shooting but said that they claimed it was accidental.

The sheriff said Miss Carey told him the youths shot her when she refused to surrender her auto to them.

4 Convicted of Vote Fraud in Kansas City

Kansas City, May 21 (AP).—A Federal court jury added four more names today to the 32 already convicted of conspiring to defraud voters in the November 3 election here. ## Today's Sermon

By the Rev. Hirl A. Kester,
Pastor, Congress Street M. P. Church.

There are certain lines running through my mind—with challenging persistence. Lines that should be memorized by every young person who is leaving school and starting out in the world: "Isn't it strange that princes and kings, and clowns that caper in sawdust rings, and common folk like you and me are builders for eternity? To each is given a bag of tools, a shapeless mass, a book of rules, and each must make, ere life is flown, a stumbling block or a stepping stone."

Many young people are standing on the threshold of the arena of life. Some cling to that old saying that "Some men are born to success; some men achieve to success, while others have success thrust upon them." But my young friends, life tells another story. The one road that leads to success is the road of nobility of character, honesty of purpose and sincerity of effort. There is no room for the idle visionary, but there is room higher up for the person with a definite object in life and an ambition to attain it. The world makes room for a man going somewhere and knows where and why he is going. You find yourself in the arena and the crown awaits only that girl or boy who is willing to pick it up and carry it as a trophy to victory.

Are you looking for steppingstones? Well, you must carve them from the material that has been given you. The tools that you must use to shape these steppingstones are "promptness" and "decision." The balance wheel in your watch travels about nine and one-half miles every day, but it never gets anywhere. History has recorded and will record men of decision. Remember, that whether your decision is great or small, come to grip with it for it is just as important for you to decide as any decision the President of the United States has.

Many are substituting excuse for action and tell the world what they would do if conditions were different. If I only had Jim's brains, Bill's money, Harry's personality. Avoid this frame of mind as you would avoid a rattlesnake. No one cares a bit what you would do if things were different. The big question is what you are going to do with what you have. Above all take God's book as your guide, and Jesus Christ as your Saviour, for you cannot find success without them.

Radio Violation Of Free Speech Charged by CIO

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 21.—Textile labor organizers today canceled a contract with the Colonial Network to broadcast a speech by John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., asserting the network "violated free speech" by insisting upon an accompanying statement opposing C. I. O. principles.

The Textile Workers Organizing Committee, in announcing the cancellation, said it would file formal protest with the Federal Communications Commission against the radio company and John Shepard 3d, its head.

Meanwhile, the committee said it had arranged to have the Committee for Industrial Organization chairman's speech at Lawrence, Mass., this Sunday broadcast by three independent stations. A speech by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, also will be broadcast.

Lewis' appearance at a Lawrence mass meeting will be his first in New England as head of the C. I. O.

The textile organizing committee said the proposed announcement by the radio company, to which it objected, follows:

"The next hour has been engaged by the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee. The opinions to be expressed during the period are those of the speaker and his organization. They do not reflect the opinion of this network, the management of which is definitely opposed to certain principles of the C. I. O., notably the sit-down strike."

Scientist Churches SubjectAnnounced

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Psalms 86:4, "Rejoice the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips." (Psalms 63:5.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man is harmonious when governed by soul. Hence the importance of understanding the truth of being, which reveals the laws of spiritual existence."

Tails, Topper Burglar Given 40-Year Term

Cuban Waiter Must Serve Minimum of 12 Years for Robberies.

Dapper George Garcia, Washington's full-dress burglar, was sentenced yesterday to from 12 to 40 years in jail on more than a score of charges, by Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

Garcia, immaculately clad in a light gray suit and with his curly hair well combed, stood without flinching while Justice Letts gave him four three-year to ten-year sentences, to run consecutively, and then permitted more than a score of additional indictments to run concurrently with the last sentence.

Garcia, a young Cuban waiter, was convicted of three cases of housebreaking and entered pleas of guilty to 22 more.

Under present laws, Justice Letts could have given a sentence of from 103 to 515 years. The sentence will require Garcia to serve at least 12 years before he will become eligible for parole.

Attired in a dress suit, Garcia plied his burglary trade with impunity for months. He often went into the most select neighborhoods and his mode of operation was simplicity itself—a tiny piece of celluloid. With that inserted between the door and the lock he was able to enter homes and apartments with ease, after first having ascertained the place was at least temporarily vacant.

Much of the loot obtained by Garcia was disposed of through New York fences, who are yet to face trial. After his arrest the Cuban boasted to police he was a "master crfatsman." He took them on a tour of the city pointing out homes and apartments he had entered with his tiny piece of celluloid.

Tests Fail to Show Assault in Murder

Bakersfield, Calif., May 21 (AP).—Officials investigating the death of Dorothy Shrum, 19, became entangled in a difference of opinion over procedure today. Laboratory tests showed the girl had not been criminally attacked or subjected to an abortion, said Tom Scott, district attorney.

He added he had no reason for holding her mother, Mrs. Hildreth Shrum, but Sheriff Ed Champness continued to detain her without charge in the county jail.

Others held are Bernice Shrum, the victim's younger sister; Percy Masson, who employed Mrs. Shrum as housekeeper; W. G. Benton, employe of Masson, and Dorothy's former sweetheart, Herman Cash. The semi-nude body of Miss Shrum was found early this week in her bedroom, with bruises on her throat.

Poland Considers Plan to Evacuate Jewish Population

Warsaw, Poland, May 21 (AP).—Poland's government is seriously considering mass evacuation of Jews to Palestine, to French Madagascar off Africa, or to some other haven to avoid future anti-Semitic disturbances in the country.

The foreign office newspaper, Polish Political Information, today discussed the situation which long has troubled Poland after anti-Jewish outbreaks in several towns the past few days.

The government "consistently has treated with sympathy the idea of Palestine as a national home for the Jews" and always encouraged Polish Jews who wish to go there, the newspaper said. But all of Poland's 3,000,000 Jews among a population of 34,000,000 cannot be absorbed by Palestine, the foreign-office mouthpiece continued, so other areas must be found.

Mural Pictures Justice Stone To Represent Law's Triumph

Central Figure 'Leading People to More Abundant Life,' Says Kroll, Artist of New Wall Painting for U. S. Building.

By the Associated Press.

Justice Harlan F. Stone, of the Supreme Court, is the central figure in a new mural at the Justice Department depicting the triumph of justice.

Leon Kroll, of New York, the artist, said yesterday the justice represents "law leading the people to a more abundant life."

The justice frequently has voted for New Deal legislation. He is shown on the crest of a hill, reaching a helping hand to a group of people climbing from a valley which represents chaos.

The artist said he chose Stone "because he had the best-shaped head."

"Attorney General Cummings' bald head just wouldn't do."

Kroll said the justice chuckled when asked if he objected to being portrayed 20 years younger than he actually is.

"Whoever does?" Stone replied.

The justice's portrait is "slightly idealized" because, it was explained, dark hair shows up better than gray against the light sky of the painting.

Kroll, the Carnegie Art Institute prize winner, took two years to paint the mural and another, also for the Justice Department, depicting the defeat of justice.

His wife appears in the second panel as "an intellectual woman among others being driven into chaos." Some New York debutante, a Negro elevator operator, an unidentified baby, and several art students posed for the other figures.

Tennessee to Vote On Dry Law Repeal

Live Wire Is Fatal To Girl Atop Cars

A 14-year-old colored girl died at Emergency Hospital early last night from shocks and burns suffered when she touched a live wire while walking along the tops of freight cars on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks near Twelfth and D streets southwest.

The dead girl was Margaret Riley, of 127 Virginia avenue southwest.

According to the only witness, J. D. K. Summers, 2418 Blair road northwest, a fireman who was near the 16-car train at the time, the girl was crawling along the top of a freight car, stood up suddenly and hit her head against the electric wires.

Tiger Claws Spectator.

St. Joseph, Mo., May 21 (AP).—While 3,000 spectators screamed, a tiger at an indoor circus reached out at H. G. Getchell, 81, when he moved too near the cage last night and clawed the man severely before attendants drove the animal back

Throng Watches Missouri Hanging

Galena, Mo., May 21 (AP).—Curious people packed the courthouse lawn and peered from vantage points as Roscoe (Red) Jackson was hanged today in a State where legalization of the lethal gas chamber soon may supplant the gallows.

It was ten minutes after the trap was sprung before Jackson was pronounced dead, paying with his life for killing an Indiana man

A Permanent CCC.

The Senate's better wisdom prevailed when it rejected the House proposal to limit the Civilian Conservation Corps to two more years of existence. As a conditioning agent for the hundreds of thousands of boys who, regardless of increased employment, find difficulty in fitting themselves into the economic system, the CCC has proved itself unequaled. Linked with the United States Employment Service, it should prove to be a valuable adjunct to the country's permanent defenses against social and economic instability.

The Senate bill, furthermore, would bring the CCC into the civil service system by requiring all employes, except those connected with the Army, to submit to non-competitive examinations. This provision, which the House omitted, is certainly desirable. One criticism of the bill, however, has been brought out by Senator Borah, who voted against it. While finding no fault with the CCC and looking with favor upon its establishment as a permanent institution, he protested lack of any consistent rule by which boys in the future would be admitted to it. It would be undemocratic, he declared, to admit indiscriminately 300,000 boys when there are 1,000,000 or more who might be enrolled.

The point is fairly taken. Notwithstanding the CCC's immense contribution in the conservation of public lands and resources, its first attention must always be centered on human conservation. There may be 1,000,000 boys eligible for the camps, but with facilities available to admit only 300,000 some formula should be devised whereby the lads in greatest need of this experience could be selected—those who without the help of the CCC might be expected to crack under the strain of continued maladjustment and unemployment.

Without some such admission system, the CCC would become merely a junior, albeit non-military, Army assigned to the task of preserving our natural resources. What it should be, in addition, is more of a human rehabilitation agency.

Three Times And In?

All good things come in threes, runs the adage. Certainly it appears so from the Senate's latest vote on the "red rider." For the third time this session, it has approved the outright elimination of that discredited provision in the District supply bill.

The Senate's current action was not precisely a duplication of the preceding two votes on the rider. This time the Senate not only voted repeal of the rider, but also agreed to an added proviso setting forth that its action should in no wise be taken as an approval of communism. But as no sensible person can conceive of the Senate indorsing communism, the new clause made no practical difference.

The House is scheduled to act on the same proposal shortly. In its vote, the disavowal of sympathy for communism is expected to have a significance. The House, it will be recalled, has hitherto balked at out-and-out repeal of the "red rider." It is hoped now, however, that the opposition will be won over by the anti-communism expression. Aside from this strictly political consideration, the proviso means as little in the House as the Senate. It is absurd to imagine either body ever indorsing communism.

A Clean-Cut Victory.

The poll of the Jones & Laughlin employes was a clean-cut victory for the C. I. O., gaining for this organized group the right to act as an exclusive bargaining agency in accordance with the procedure laid down by the Wagner act. Both sides deserve to be congratulated for the rational way in which the disputed question of representation has been settled.

The election was participated in by most of the workers and the verdict is authoritative. As pointed out by the regional director of the Labor Relations Board, Ernest C. Dunbar, it has shown the "obvious advantage of peaceful settlement of labor disputes over the use of strife and violence." He might have added that it has also shown the great advantage of a supervised election over informal or nonofficial polls.

The decisiveness of the verdict is a warning to other steel companies of the futility of efforts to obstruct the course of collective bargaining. If they still harbor doubts as to the attitude of their employes toward the C. I. O. union, these companies would be wise to follow the example set by Jones & Laughlin in urging an election. Whatever the outcome, they would be under legal obligation to accord exclusive bargaining rights to the victorious majority. That is the only way in which effective collective bargaining can be established in the mass-production industries. It does not mean introducing the closed shop into industry; the controversy over the closed shop simply ceases to be a live issue when the management recognizes the right of one organization to make terms for all its employes.

At this stage in the development of collective bargaining in the steel industry the foundation for later peaceful negotiations is being laid. Negotiations over hours and conditions of work lie ahead. The steel industry has, however, made notable progress toward settlement of the question of union recognition, which is in itself a prolific cause of disputes and a serious obstacle to any sort of collective bargaining.

Reaping The Whirlwind.

When Senator Robinson was first prominently mentioned as a successor to Justice Van Devanter there was little disposition to regard it seriously. The Senate leader's claims upon the Administration are strong. But this vacancy comes at a time when the President is engaged in a terrific fight to inject into the judicial system "a steady and continuing stream of new and younger blood." To select a man approaching 65 years of age for a place on the Supreme Court under these circumstances would give to the court-packing proposal a farcical twist seldom equaled in American history.

It is important to remember that the enthusiasm for Senator Robinson's appointment comes from the Senate. Presumably this "boom" does not in any way reflect the view of the White House. There is every reason to believe that the President is sincere in his desire to see younger men who are imbued with New Deal philosophy functioning in the courts. But this does not necessarily mean that Senator Robinson will be overlooked when the time comes to select Justice Van Devanter's successor.

The fact is that powerful political influences are backing Senator Robinson for this position. Whether or not the President promised Mr. Robinson the first vacant seat on the Supreme bench, as is frequently rumored, it might be very difficult for the President to deny him this honor if the Senate leader actively seeks it. For Mr. Robinson has been the most faithful and energetic supporter of the New Deal in the Senate. To thwart what is said to be his long-standing ambition would weaken the President's influence in the Senate at a time when support is most urgently needed.

In some respects, moreover, the Robinson "boom" appears to be a definite part of the revolt against the Supreme Court bill. The Senate has plainly manifested its distaste for the "young blood" argument. Indorsement of its no-longer-youthful leader for appointment to the prospective vacancy on the court is one way of demonstrating senatorial contempt for the President's plan. Not a few legislators appear to be speaking once for Mr. Robinson and twice against the court bill.

The most ironical aspect of the incident, however, is the President's own predicament. Reports are going the rounds to the effect that the Senate would refuse to confirm the President's nominee for the Supreme Court if Mr. Robinson should be passed over. That view is doubtless exaggerated. Nevertheless, it appears that Mr. Roosevelt will have to choose between a ridiculous climax to his court-packing venture, on the one hand, and a more far-reaching revolt in the Senate on the other.

Sympathy for the President in this predicament will be tempered by realization that he himself set the trap which is now threatening to close upon him. By attempting to subordinate the court to his own political philosophy the President has encouraged other efforts to make the Supreme bench a cat's-paw of politics. That, of course, is one of the most dangerous aspects of his judiciary bill.

With due regard for Senator Robinson's experience and ability as a legislator, no one regards him as a distinguished jurist. His appointment would be interpreted as the payment of a political debt at a high cost to the President as well as the Supreme Court. And if such an appointment should become a part of a deal to minimize Senate opposition to the court-packing proposal, the prestige of our judicial system would undergo a most serious eclipse.

Italy's King At Budapest.

The popular acclaim which King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and his party, which includes Count Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, have received in Budapest bears witness to the cordial relations that have obtained between Italy and Hungary for more than a decade.

The ties of amity established by the Italo-Hungarian treaty of 1927 have been strengthened by the Rome protocols of 1934 and by Premier Mussolini's vigorous espousal of the Hungarian cause of treaty revision. Surrounded on three sides by nations of the Little Entente, which are determined to keep the Magyar territory they secured after the World War, Hungary has been grateful for Italian sympathy and support.

It would take a very real inducement for Hungary to break its entente with Italy. Nonetheless, it is clear that there has been, of late, some cooling off in Magyar-Italian amity. Italy's recent treaty with Yugoslavia has perturbed the Budapest government. It tends to show that Mussolini's belief in territorial revision in favor of Hungary is subject to limitations. At the same time Austria has been putting pressure on Hungary to accept a program of economic co-operation in the Danube Basin.

Both Italy and Germany are more or less closed markets at present. Trade with those nations can be conducted only under difficulties. If Hungary, therefore, is to take advantage of the boom in the price of farm products and raw materials, it must build up its trade lines with other nations. Yet it can only do so by accepting a program of political appeasement and the shelving of its revisionist demands.

The defection at this time of Hungary from the Italo-German camp would be a serious blow to the Berlin-Rome axis. Since Austria is seeking a larger degree of independence, such action would effectively block the establishment of a Fascist Mitteleuropa. It is not surprising, then, that Italy is leaving no stone unturned to preserve Italo-Hungarian friendship and bind the Budapest government more closely than ever to Rome.

Ostensibly the Italian monarch is merely returning the visit made to Rome some months ago by Admiral Horthy, the Hungarian regent. Actually, however, the presence in the Hungarian capital of the Italian royal party has very considerable political interest and importance.

Retirement And Economy.

The main argument in favor of a reduction in the retirement age of civil servants, at the option of the employe or the Government, is that it would facilitate removal or voluntary withdrawal of the prematurely aged or incompetent. That is plainly the chief purpose of the plan indorsed by the Civil Service Commission and approved "in principle" by the President. It is reported, however, that the President hesitates to urge immediate legislative action because the cost of the proposed changes is estimated at $8,000,000 annually.

As a matter of fact, the cost estimates are highly conjectural. The additional pension payments resulting from reduction of the optional retirement age would depend upon the number of employes who voluntarily retired and the extent to which the Government exercised its right to compel retirement. In view of the modest pensions received by the great majority of civil service employes, it is most unlikely that a large number would exercise an option to retire at an earlier age, except under great pressure. As President Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission puts it succintly, "no one wants to quit his job." On the contrary, in many cases employes who have reached the present legal retiring age try desperately to secure an extension of time.

It seems highly probable, therefore, that the additional cost of the proposed pension reform would result very largely from the exercise of the Government's option to remove employes. There is no reason to suppose that the number of such removals would be excessively high, given adequate safeguards against arbitrary action. The danger of abuse of the removal privilege, however, presents a serious problem, much more deserving of consideration than the superficial cost factor. Assuming that the system would be conscientiously administered, removals would be for cause and limited to cases where employes had become a detriment to the service—a liability rather than an asset.

Under these conditions, the direct cost of the optional retirement plan of the Civil Service Commission would certainly not be very great. Moreover, it might be more than offset by the indirect gains resulting from elimination of the unfit. It would be false economy to reject a proposal designed to increase the efficiency of the civil service merely because it might entail a small addition to current pension outlays. In the long run the Government itself, not the pensioned employes, would be the chief beneficiary of these payments.

B'ars In Bars.

The undesirability of bulls in China shops must be universally admitted. But in New Jersey it has been something of a question whether bears can be tolerated in bars. Or perhaps it should be "b'ars in bars." At any rate, the matter was laid before the State beverage control commission. And its ruling has been that bears, at least of the four-legged variety, must be excluded from drinking places unless securely caged.

Somewhere in the town of Ocean, it appears, a barkeeper had installed a bear on his premises. Whether it was of the polar species assigned to guard the beer cooler, or whether it was a little brown bear with Yellowstone manners who might frolic with the Bock goat, has not been made clear. In any event, it was some ursine representative, and that was enough to stir up a protest.

Now the beverage commission has sustained that protest. While admitting that "the uncaged one might serve well in the maintenance of order," the official opinion reaches the studied conclusion that a bear in a bar might lead to "mortification, if not downright disaster, to some of the patrons who are prone to vaunt their pluck or prowess."

The bear, in sum, must go. This doubtless will reassure the bibbers of Ocean. The ruling will not, however, quite solve a problem of drinkers generally. Not bears but elephants are said to be the complaint in most bars. And the elusive character of the pink species makes them an especially difficult problem.

Civil Service Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a Civil Service worker of many years' standing, I would like to take exception to the remarks of "An Observer" in The Post of May 20.

Naturally he is concerned about his own job, as who isn't; but he does not have to blind himself to facts. First, I would like to know where this bureau is where the regular employes can sit around and let the temporaries do all the work. I would like to be transferred there, as nothing of that sort goes on where I am employed. In fact, quite the opposite is true. We have had temporary workers here in my bureau and since they had nothing to lose they did not care if school kept or not. The regular employes had their ratings to watch all the time.

It does not seem very logical to me for persons to squawk when they come to a place to work on a temporary basis and stay twice as long as they expected to in the beginning. Also the temporary employes and the employes not under Civil Service in the temporary bureaus are getting larger salaries for the same kind of work that old employes do and have been doing for years.

Some of us must study, attain a certain qualification in order to take an examination, then take that examination in competition with many others and wait until we are called. Others come in without an examination, work for a while and then holler to be blanketed in. What's wrong with that picture?

CIVIL SERVICE WORKER.
Washington, May 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not suppose it occurred to "Observer" that for many years the Civil Service employes have carried on the work of the United States Government faithfully and efficiently and that during the World War they worked day and night for their Government without any extra compensation and at very low salaries. Now some of these people are in supervisory positions and direct the work of the new employes, giving them the benefit of their knowledge and experience and training them for the time when they (the older clerks) will resign or retire.

The President At Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This last Sunday—Whitsunday—an important church festival to many Christians in the United States, I attended service at St. Thomas' Church in Washington. The President, his wife and some other members of his family were there, remaining for the whole service, lasting over an hour and a half. Both the President and his wife partook of the Communion.

More important than the number of fish the President caught or the kind of dress that his wife wore to a tea, to many who prayed earnestly for the President of our country in churches throughout the country on this day, was the fact that he was himself publicly seeking divine guidance for himself and the country. Yet I saw no mention of this in any paper. M. D.

No Summer Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, who have enjoyed the concerts at the Watergate the past two summers, am bitterly disappointed, as no doubt are thousands of others, to learn that the National Symphony Orchestra Association will give no concerts this summer. When these concerts were inaugurated Dr. Kindler was so enthusiastic at the huge attendance at the first concert, which attendance did not diminish in the least during the rest of the season, that I thought the Watergate concerts would become a permanent institution. I notice that when the association comes to the public for money for a sustaining fund, it states that the orchestra is performing a "public service," but when it comes to giving summer concerts, which are needed much more than the winter concerts, "public service" is the last thing they think of.

I notice from the association's recent report on the results of its drive for funds, that it raised $84,000. It seems to me that $84,000 plus the box office receipts is ample to cover both summer and winter concerts. Anyway, what are the musicians themselves doing this year? Last year they gave the concerts on a co-operative basis. They certainly were successful, inasmuch as the attendance was almost as great as the previous year. The fact that the attendance was not as good was due entirely to inclement weather. I remember reading editorials in the newspapers congratulating the men on the success of their venture. Under the circumstances I don't see why they can't go on with the concerts this summer.

During the week we have the service bands, but on Sundays we have absolutely no music at all. If only one concert a week, on Sundays, could be given it would be better than nothing. It would give one something to look forward to on this dreariest of days as I have found it to be. MUSIC LOVER.

Ambassadors' Views.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some opponents of the legislation affecting the Supreme Court have suggested the recall of our Ambassador, Mr. Dodd, from the German court, because of his published letters favoring the Administration's support of that legislation. But there seems to be equally strong ground for the Administration's objection to the letters.

When the British Ambassador in Washington advised a native Briton, who was a naturalized citizen of the United States, to vote for Mr. Cleveland, and the advice became known, Mr. Cleveland promptly asked the British government to recall the Ambassador, which it did without a protest.

There is at least a strong conviction that while an Ambassador is representing his country in the family of nations he should refrain from taking part in legislative matters not only in other countries, but in his own country. The nation which he represents should be considered a finished product, as far as he is concerned.

The fact that Mr. Dodd's letters appear to have been given to the Nazi propaganda department in Berlin and to have the approval of that department is more likely to injure Mr. Roosevelt than the British Ambassador's views tended to injure Mr. Cleveland.

Relief Money.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before increasing the appropriation for relief in the District they should investigate those already on relief. Several weeks ago the police raided a gambling establishment and found relief checks in the receipts. Yesterday a drunken driver stated before Judge Casey that he had been on relief for two years and during that time he purchased an automobile. Evidently relief money is paid out without proper investigation.

Pro And Con On Daylight Saving.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Time is a thing which most of us know almost nothing about. It is even accepted in some quarters that time, as such, does not exist. Concerning this I couldn't say, but I do feel certain that there is nothing holy about Eastern Standard Time and that the tempo of the universe will not be disturbed if we play around just a little with the clock.

That most of the objections to this bill are motivated by a feeling of utter horror at the contemplated sacrilege and are not based upon any reasonable premise is evident from even a cursory consideration of the statements which have been printed. One fervent gentleman is so outraged that he solemnly threatens not to change his clock one blooming second even if the whole District goes mad. So what? Who cares? So far as most of us are concerned he may set his ticker in time with Hong Kong and proceed as before.

The pathetic case of the cows whose stomachs will be all upset by the change of meal time would touch us more deeply if we did not realize that it was but straw-grasping on the part of some distraught soul—and if we did not have youthful memories of cows which were fed most any time we happened to arrive at the barn but which, nevertheless, continued in fair health to a ripe old age.

The argument that daylight time will cause those who now arise at 6 in the a. m. to struggle from the feathers at 5 shows either a total lack of understanding of the nature of the proposed change or, what is more probable, a tenacious belief that E. S. T. is somehow definitely notched into the rim of the world and is simply the time regardless of what the clocks may say. Think of the trouble these people will run into if they ever travel outside the time zone or have to move to California. Will some one please explain gently to them that—impossible as it sounds—if they get up at 6 o'clock now they will still get up at 6 o'clock after we have summer time.

I doubt sincerely if one out of 100 objectors to D. S. T., if he were transported blindfolded to an unknown city and handed a watch set in time with local clocks, would be able to tell you after a week's residence whether he were living under daylight time, standard time, or something the local watchmakers had arrived at after subtracting the number of bats in a belfry from those in the local brick yard.

My personal conviction is that the residents of the District are overwhelmingly in favor of daylight saving. This overwhelming majority has not raised its voice in tune with the fanatics because to them it is simply a matter of convenience and sense and not exactly a factor in the destiny of man.

NEMESIS.
Glen Echo, Md., May 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am one of many who bitterly oppose daylight saving time.

In the first place, changing our general routine is the most injurious infliction we can place on the human machine and this change of an hour would certainly mean a drastic change, not once, mind you, but twice, as we would have to readjust our habits again in the fall. Why on earth, for the sake of humanity, can't they let time stay as is? An hour would undoubtedly mean something for a few persons, but aren't they privileged to rise when they please? For many who work in Washington live in nearby Virginia and Maryland, it would mean that time for meals, rising and retiring would conflict with other members of their families, causing confusion and discomfort. It would mean that the housewives, waitresses and other domestics would have another hour to work without added compensation. It would mean that many offices would close in mid-afternoon and clerks would have to go out into the heat of the street, many of them from air-conditioned buildings. It would mean that many who live in hot apartments would lose rest, because their stuffy bedrooms are impossible for rest and sleep before midnight, as it is, and in the cool of the morning, when sleep would be possible, they would have to get up and go to work.

I. M. FENNEST.
Washington, May 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If daylight saving were a new idea this critic could understand the political capital's reluctance to embrace it. From New York to Texas, wherever daylight saving has been given a trial, the system has been kept. Most folks thrown into contact with it elsewhere like it. Of course I do not pretend to speak for the power and light interests.

Retrospection.

NOTHING is more pleasantly engaging than restrospection in spring. Some occult attar is abroad at this season which invades our faculties and makes of us mental wantons and physical shirkers.

Today I was invited to ride in my friend's new car. He lives in the country some 20 miles from Washington, and I was to visit him. Illness prevented his coming for me, so his son, a youth of college age, was at the wheel. And, what a car! A miniature rolling palace! It skimmed along the smooth roads like a bird in air. No jolts. No mechanical noise save a soothing hum. I was aware only of a feeling of comfort; a feeling of serenity with all the world.

Lounging in the soft-cushioned seat, I wondered what I might say to the lad at my side, who drove with such dexterity and yet with such certainty. Our personal interests, I realized, were far apart, for he belonged to the Present, while I, the smell of new verdure in my nostrils, was living now in the Past.

I made an effort: "It runs fine and smooth," I said.

"Yes," he answered, eyes alertly on the road, "I think it's a beaut." He took a turn nicely. "I'm the one who made dad buy it. He wanted a——"

A truck with protruding sides engaged his attention, and he cut words short. I turned my attention to the gadgets on the dashboard—the cigar-lighter, the up-to-date radio and control, and the many other clever turn-knobs which do things or show things so important to present-day car owners.

This it was which set me to thinking of the past.

His name was Aspinwall, I believe, and he lived at the intersection of New Hampshire and Dupont Circle. His was the first self-propelled vehicle I ever saw. It was a tricycle contrivance equipped with batteries, and it ran, on occasion, slowly—but it ran. A meek-looking thing. Insignificant then.

Little did those of us (children) who jeered at it and at its inventor realize the portentousness of those slow-moving, electrically driven wheels. What they presaged for the future—that future being Now. No. We ran or walked beside it and made comments none too gentle, for those were in fact the "horse and buggy" days.

I recalled with interest how, when some one of us brought tidings of it being on the street for experiment, we hastened away from our games of baseball and football to vent our ridicule upon it. Came later, of course, the manufactured cars with mass production of a few a year. Chugging, spitting things, which finally coughed themselves to an unexpected, inexplicable stop.

Musing thusly, there came to mind songs of those days such as "Get Out and Get Under," and many others of like title which bore more of truth than of poetry. For such unhappily was the case then more often than not. Those were the embryo days in the motor-vehicle industry—the days when Horse was King and no one seemed to think his crown would ever be usurped.

Silence between the young man and myself seemed suddenly to have become oppressive. He was my friend's son. I must speak.

"These roads," I began, rather reluctantly, "are certainly smooth. They make automobiling a great pleasure."

He eyed me suspiciously, I thought. Then: "Roads?" he asked.

"Yes," I said. "They are smooth and well-kept-up."

"Oh," he said, "yes, they are."

Something in his attitude irritated me. "I can remember," I rejoined, "when roads were not so good. When traveling was a hazardous business."

"Yes," he agreed, "it must have been bad for horses and buggies."

"I mean," I said, with some vehemence, "for automobiles."

Again he eyed me. "Oh, yeah," he said, and whether his answer was placating or not I do not know, for I despise that expression and resented it.

"I mean," I replied, "for cars—automobiles."

"They're all right now," he laughed. "A fellow can go any place now on the smoothest sort of roads. I'd like for some of 'em to be a little wider, though."

"When I was a boy," I answered, trimming my smile a bit, for it was to Youth I was talking, "I lived in the South. I shall never forget the first automobile—I mean one that could take hills and chug along—because I personally helped make its progress possible. It was an open affair—a Skit I believe they called it. The driving wheel was on the right side. Passengers climbed in the rear by steps and rode several feet higher in the tonneau sort of thing, behind the operator.

"Well, the owner lived about 5 miles from town. Nobody had ever seen an auto before his came along. The roads were rutty—ruts made by horse-drawn carriages and wagons, and strewn with rocks of all sizes.

He gave me what I thought to be a dirty look.

"This fellow—the owner of the new car," I continued, "paid his son and myself 50 cents to throw the larger rocks off the road so he could have a passably safe passage."

"Oh, yeah," said my friend's son.

"Yeah," I said.

The countryside was beautiful. I leaned back again to enjoy it, satisfied, for what I had told him was true.

More Tax Exemptions.

I AM ALWAYS leading with my chin, and here I go again, for today's living, human document deals with that paragraph of the current income tax law which exempts the income of religious and charitable organizations, provided they do not carry on propaganda or attempt to influence legislation.

That provision did not exist prior to 1934, and it may have been suggested by the activities of the Anti-Saloon League and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, both of which hounded the statesmen, including the Presidents, during the long and troubled years of prohibition.

The new clause obviously has a purpose, and its language is plain, but it would be a bold, brash and suicidal public servant who would undertake to enforce it today against tax-exempt institutions which carry on propaganda and attempt to influence legislation.

There appears to be nobody that bold, brash and suicidal in the Government at this time, however, so the Treasury interprets the clause merely as a verboten against phony religious and charitable organizations, although such masqueraders in the robes of piety and mercy would seem to be amply considered elsewhere in the act.

• • • •

THE PRACTICE of interpreting the law by ear, rather than by note, is gaining popularity on all sides where the literal and practical application would cause embarrassment or loss of ground. Employers do it, labor does it in justification of the sitdown, and the Treasury discovers no reason to start a scuffle and get all bruised up for the sake of a law whose creators are conveniently assumed to have meant something else.

The law says that the income tax shall not apply to "corporations and any community chest, fund or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation."

The specific provision against attempts to influence legislation has been plainly violated during recent legislative session by tax-exempt religious bodies, not always with full public approval, and in certain cases to the indignation of citizens who believe themselves to be liberal and progressive.

The public generally may not know that organizations of the kind mentioned here are exempt from the income tax, even when they compete with private business firms that have to pay the tax. But the Supreme Court has decided that the source of income is immaterial if it is used for the permissible purposes and, in a specific case, exempted income derived from the sale of wine, chocolate and other articles.

• • • •

IN SUCH CASES—and they are of infinite variety—the private competitor sometimes has difficulty in catching the spirit of the law and the Constitution, for he must pay taxes to make up for the lack of taxes on his competitor's place and may be faced with a problem of labor costs ruinously greater than those of his neighbor.

And inasmuch as such institutions are not even requested to file a return explaining their disbursements, no proof is required that they are operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes. It would be indelicate to inquire, although such delicacy is by no means characteristic of the inquiry into the intimate affairs of those whose tax takes up the burden of the exempted enterprises.

This recalls the complaint of a small hotel man in Chicago who said he was being ruined by the competition of a tax-exempt hotel near by and wanted to know if there wasn't any remedy for him. If he sees this he may be advised that the answer of the Supreme Court is, "No."

It may be of interest, also, that railroads are allowed to offer free transportation or a half-fare to clergymen. As a mail-order bishop of the Union Church of Colorado I am looking into this rather hopefully. Never having been one to do things by halves, I shall ignore the half-fare and ask for free tickets.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

("The President did not go into detail about his plans for the immediate future. He signed a bill declaring the waters of Scajaquada Creek unnavigable."—News item.)

The President is home again,
And his intentions we must seek;
But anyhow he's shown his hand
At once on Scajaquada Creek.

No word on labor has he now,
His budget attitude is weak,
His mind is open on some things—
But closed is Scajaquada Creek!

Not clear on savings does he seem;
He doesn't say what should be cut;
New waters he may navigate—
But Scajaquada Creek is shut!

The Nation wonders whither bound
And if it's riding for a fall.
But Scajaquada Creek's affairs
Have now been settled, once for all.

How will the country's debt be met?
Is our debt now the very peak?
Suffice it for you now to know
You can't cruise Scajaquada Creek.

Are greater taxes just ahead?
On budgets how is he disposed?
I cannot say; I only know
That Scajaquada Creek is closed.

Will he push to the very end
His packing of the Court Supreme?
He says so, but the fact is this:
You can't sail Scajaquada's stream.

Will there be real economies?
Will prudence mark his second term?
The tidings show but one clear fact—
On Scajaquada Creek he's firm!

Oh, Scajaquada Creek is closed!
To that he quickly did attend,
But somehow I've a feeling that
We'll all go up it in the end!

Can't Go Wrong.

If Justice Van Devanter accepts the President's invitation to call on him at the White House he will know the proper hour. Obviously from 5 to 4.

Grover Whalen says the New York world fair will top the coronation. Don't tell us you will feature the Duke of Windsor!

The Federated Motion Picture Crafts ask the boycott of five motion picture actors. Maybe we'll see banners reading, "All the love scenes in this picture are unfair to organized labor."

Here's Hoping.

Prof. Joe and Dr. Bill
At Columbia they will instill
Into the minds of students there
Such baseball dope as they can spare.

Prof. Bill and Dr. Joe
Through all the inside facts will go;
It may keep students awake, wide-eyed—
Heaven knows everything else has been tried!

Possibly murder would be taken a little less lightly in this country if detectives didn't pose, grinning from ear to ear, with the criminals. And if assistant district attorneys were less obliging in the matter of close-ups with confessed slayers.

Future Of The Republican Party

British Observer Says Fate Depends On '38 Elections.

Following are excerpts from an article in the current issue of the Political Quarterly (London). The author, who recently completed a tour of the United States, is an Oxford professor of political science and a special correspondent of The Post.

By D. W. Brogan.

THE RECENT American election has made of great interest and topicality a question that, eight years ago, would have seemed fantastically unreal, the question, "Can the Republican Party survive?"

When Mr. Hoover was inaugurated in March, 1929, the problem of party survival in America might have seemed to be exclusively something for the Democrats to worry over. The Republican Party had won an unprecedented electoral victory; it had repulsed the attack of a very formidable Democratic candidate; it had more than held its own.

Within two years the great vessel was straining all the resources of her pumps and, within another two years, she was barely keeping afloat; today, it seems to many that she may soon sink.

Hoover And G. O. P. Suffered In Depression.

WHAT HAS CAUSED this change? One explanation of the evil fortunes of the Republican Party is, of course, highly relevant—as far as it goes. The depression that began with the bursting of the "Hoover boom" in 1929 angered the American people as corresponding smashes have angered other peoples. Mr. Hoover and his party suffered for the same reasons as Dr. Bruning or the Labor Party in 1931.

That this was the occasion of the defeat of the party at the Congressional elections of 1930 cannot be doubted. That the continuance of the depression accounted in large part for the failure of the party in 1932, to make a respectable fight is also obviously true, but the successive defeats of 1934, which was worse than 1932, and of 1936 which was worse than 1934, suggest more fundamental reasons for party despondency.

In America, as in other countries, more than in other countries indeed, the first business of a party is to produce prosperity; to fail to do that is punished severely, but to continue the punishment, to make it more and more severe as the memory of the disillusionment grows more remote, suggests that the American people has more against the once dominant party than the collapse of the bull market and the depression. It suggests a temper that leads to political revolutions, not to sporadic and economically motivated revolts.

The present sad state of the organization that for two generations considered, and rightly considered, itself the normal government of the Union, is due in great part to its former adequacy to its role. The experience of the 60 years of power had a highly selective effect on the personnel, on the doctrines, on the political practice of the party. To its complete adequacy for the role of dominant party in a given political and economic setup the Republicans owe their past triumphs and their present low estate.

U. S. Political Parties Have Economic Functions.

WHAT WAS that economic and political setup? Economic should come first in this analysis, for an American party to succeed has to perform a task which is primarily economic, though performed with formally political instruments. It has to unite sections of a vast country in a common program of exploitation of the economic resources of the Nation. As geography dictated a high degree of sectional differentiation in economic life, the interests of different type of production could be easily identified with geographical regions and, as the government was Federal, the sections could be defined in terms of groups of States. The groups that, in combination, controlled the Federal Government were in favor of strengthening it; the group or groups shut out from this control tried to limit its efficacy by the doctrine of States' rights.

The failure of the legal doctrine to serve the ends of the slave States resulted in the Civil War; the result of that war determined, for good, that secession from the Union was a remedy barred to a section that thought itself victimized. The victor in this struggle in politics and on the battlefield was the Republican Party, that is, the political alliance of the Middle West grain States with the industrial East. That party remained in power as long and only as long as the alliance of the manufacturer and the Western farmer held together; grave discontent in one adherent to the pact let the Democrats, reduced by the fortune of war to being the organ of the South and of minor economic interests (shipping and importing for instance), into power. When the West and the East made terms, the Democrats were again excluded from national office. In fact they attained it only about once in a generation.

HERBERT HOOVER.

But the Republican Party had not only practical economic assets to depend on; it had not only the natural advantage of being able to foster the interests of its allies (or owners) and thus increase their and its power. It had emotional assets. It had "saved the Union;" preoccupation with the causes and results of the Civil War was less intense on the victorious side than on the defeated, but it was great, and, as the victorious sections were relatively and absolutely much more populous, rich, and powerful than the defeated, the lesser intensity of emotional fixation was more than compensated for by its much greater extension. The North and West might only think of the war at election time, while the South thought of it all the time; but at election time was often enough. Over the greater part of the United States, then, the normal majority was Republican.

Republicans Avoided Innovations As Harmful.

IN SUCH CIRCUMSTANES, it was natural that the Republican Party should avoid as dangerous any innovations in practice or doctrine that could be avoided, since they could not better a situation which already made America, for that party, the best of all possible worlds. The Republican Pangloss had reasons for his optimism. It followed that the man who sought a career in politics naturally sought it in the ranks of the dominant party since that involved no sacrifice of opinion. Provided one did not believe in absolute free trade or in the right of secession, one could be received as a loyal member of the national Republican Party. What was asked of the aspirant, in addition, depended on the local, not on the national state, of the party. Thus within the party all ranges of opinion were permitted or only occasionally and intermittently reproved.

The type of man who came to the top in Republican politics, local and national, but more especially in national politics, was then a man trained to play one type of political game with great skill, a game putting a high premium on conformity to certain rules and principles, a conformity adequate to the normal situation, but hopelessly inadequate, indeed crippling, in a new situation. The normal good Republican believed that there was one fundamental practical rule in politics, that the businessman was always right in his fundamental demands, that the American people deeply appreciated this truth.

Republican Survival Hinges On Adaptability.

The problem of Republican survival hangs on the ability of the party (i. e., the leaders of the party) to realize that the old dog needs new tricks and on the ability of the old dog to perform new tricks. The Republican Party must adjust itself, that is to say, to a political world in which, for the moment, the psychological weight of the support of "business" is much less than it was—some would say that it is a handicap—and to an age which has at last forgotten Lincoln. It must find a new practical basis or wait until the old order has returned under its own steam; it must, in any case, find a new sentimental basis.

An election in which only two States stick to the Grand Old Party, in which the Democrats in the North were able, without producing any serious hostile reaction in the South, to win over an overwhelming majority of the Negro vote, has revealed the passing of the fixed emotional pattern to which two generations had accustomed the Republican leaders. Inside the frame of business rule and patriotic prestige as the party of the Union the party had successfully maneuvered; two sides of that frame have gone for good and must be replaced. The survival of the party depends on its ability to retain control of the allegiance of the sections of the American people hostile by temperament and interest to the left-wing tendencies of the Roosevelt Administration and also on its ability to acquire a new set of emotional assets to replace those that, after 70 years of use, have now definitely proved inadequate. What chances has the party doing this?

At first sight they are not great. The interests which hitherto have given prestige, loyalty, and cash to the Republican Party will not, it is true, cease to exist, but they may decide that the party no longer can give any real reason for business patronage. The practical businessman will tend to look on the situation with the eye of a practical politician. He will note that, to begin with, the Republican Party, if it is to be rehabilitated, will require a great deal of money, indeed, for it is almost wholly without the auxiliary aid of State or municipal office.

Democrats At Bottom Still Held Minor Ranks.

AT THE LOWEST EBB of its fortunes, the Democratic Party had in the States of the Solid South and, in great city machines like those of New York, Boston, Kansas City, bases from which the sinews of war and disciplined troops could be drawn. At the lowest ebb of Democratic Congressional fortunes in 1920, these regions were loyal to the party. And these assets seemed indestructible; even in 1928, with an electoral triumph comparable to that of the Democrats in 1932 (though much less impressive than that of 1936), the Republicans made few inroads into their opponents' Congressional strength.

The greater part of the professional Republican politicians, all over the Union, have been out of office for from four to six years; even if this exclusion has not been financially ruinous for them, it has been bad for party discipline and, as the Republican Party has always depended (with reasonable confidence) on national predominance, lean years in Nation, State and city are far more demoralizing to them than to Democrats who in the South, in New York (both State and city), and in other regions have always had the spiritual and fleshly nourishment of successful retention of office somewhere.

The Republican Party machine over a great part of the United States was dead in the spring of 1936; it was only galvanized into a semblance of life for the campaign of that year and, since the shattering defeat of November, the machine must again have stopped dead over most of the Union. The sections of American economic life that have used the Republican Party in the past have not given up hope of finding a political party to suit them, but they may well decide that it would be cheaper, easier and more efficient to start a new one, that is, to wait for a split in the Democratic Party, a split that, they calculate, cannot indefinitely be postponed and is only delayed by the unprecedented prestige of President Roosevelt and by his immense political skill.

That such a split must occur; that a large section of the left or right wings of the dominant party must hive off seems obvious. If Mr. Roosevelt or his immediate successor does not move to the left, there will be a recrudescence of Western agrarian revolt, probably accompanied by a corresponding movement among the Eastern industrialists.

Republicans Can Point To 16,000,000 Adherents.

WHAT HAVE the Republicans to set against such arguments, what assets can they produce that will be worth buying? First of all, they can point out that the fantastic Democratic majorities in the Electoral College and in Congress grossly exaggerate the disparity in strength between the two parties.

The Republican Party polled about three-fifths as many votes as the Democrats and a party that actually has 16,000,000 votes at its disposal is not negligible. More than that, the Republican politician still has the advantage of a name that, in some regions, has real prestige value.

All over the Eastern and Central States there are large areas where the Republicans are still the Grand Old Party and, should that party disappear or merge in another, it is by no means certain that these regions would be safely conservative. It is conceivable that a brand-new conservative party in America would not carry Maine and Vermont and, though such a failure would be more than compensated for if Texas or Virginia were won, it is by no means certain that they would be won. Of the 16,000,000 persons who voted the Republican ticket there are some who voted for it because it was the Republican ticket. Until we can be quite certain that this section is really negligible, we may expect to see the prudent politician avoiding any desperate measures. The very completeness of the Republican defeat has at any rate cleared the decks of a good deal of overseasoned timber.

New Men, New Methods Needed To Revive G. O. P.

IF THE PARTY is to be revived at all, it must be by new men and new methods, and this is so obvious that the way is open to those new men and new methods. Thus there is a real opportunity to free the party from some of the stiffness that grew on it as a result of such long success. While remaining fundamentally conservative, it need not make such gross blunders in tactics as that fantastic clinging to the corpse of Prohibition which marked its course in 1932.

A Republican Party, led more realistically, freed from the illusion that the electors shared the very natural belief of the politicians that there was something intolerable in the mere thought of the Democrats staying in power, might be a powerful weapon of American conservatism.

The Franco-Russian Alliance Stands.

SINCE IT came into being two years ago, the Franco-Russian alliance has been the houn' dawg of European diplomacy.

It has been belabored with sticks and stones by Nazis, Italians, Poles, Belgians, Yugoslavs and even Frenchmen. It has had a bad press in all those quarters that chronically regard Soviet Russia with suspicion. In the days of Pierre Laval, who on his visit to Moscow initialed the alliance on behalf of France, it was the Cinderella of the Quai d'Orsay and not even a pumpkin coach was provided for it.

Laval was anything but enthusiastic about the Russian pact. Its only value to France, as he saw it, was for blackmailing purposes—to force concessions from Germany and show Poland there was more than one string to France's bow. He regarded friendship with other nations—notably Italy—as far more valuable and he proved this by his catastrophic trip to Rome in January, 1935. Out of that visit came the Ethiopian War and a whole Pandora's box of evils.

• • • •

DESPITE LAVAL'S canny tactics regarding the ratification of the Franco-Russian agreement, it was finally approved. But since then the pressure on the French government to drop the alliance has increased rather than diminished.

This pressure has come from various sources. The French Right parties and publicists, with few exceptions, have been hostile to it. The Yugoslav government, which has never established diplomatic relations with Moscow, has not been happy about it. Above all, Germany and its partners have carried on an unrelenting war to smash it.

On more than one occasion, in fact, the Nazi regime has made the abandonment of the Franco-Russian alliance the sine qua non of a revived Locarno arrangement in western Europe. And Belgium has been so fearful of becoming the indirect partner of the Soviet government in a war that it has, practically speaking, abandoned its alliance with France.

• • • •

IT WOULD HAVE been surprising, indeed, if all this pressure had had no effect on France. It is a significant fact, certainly, that while the Paris government has refused to abandon the alliance with Russia it has thus far failed to implement it by a military convention.

This circumstance gave rise, sometime ago, to an abundance of titillating rumors. It was said, for instance, that Russia, irritated by the coldness of its French ally, was planning to seek a rapprochement with Nazi Germany.

In view of the Nuremberg speeches and particularly in view of the ideas of German expansion to the east expounded by Hitler in "Mein Kampf," this seemed incredible. But it was pounted out that (1) Germany and Russia had been the best of friends from 1922 to 1933; (2) that despite Hitler's well-advertised hatred of bolshevism he had agreed to the renewal of the 1926 treaty with Russia under which Germany pledged itself not to permit the transport of troops across German territory for an attack on Russia and had, furthermore, sanctioned the extension of loans to the Soviet; and (3) that there were powerful elements in the Reichswehr which favored a Russo-German entente.

It was also rumored that in the Russian high command by no means all of the leaders were as enamored of the Franco-Russian alliance as was, say, Tukhachevsky. In particular, rumors had it that A. I. Yegeroff, who has since replaced Tukhachevsky as second in command of the Red army, was openly in favor of a pro-German orientation while Marshal Voroshiloff, the war commissar, was himself rather lukewarm to the pro-French policy.

• • • •

WHETHER VALID or not, and there is much of the fantastic about them, these rumors had to be taken into consideration by the French government. What is more to the point, France had to consider the possibility that Russia, with its Far Eastern flank no longer in great danger from Japan, might retreat into isolation.

Such considerations were reinforced by the persistent efforts of Italy and Germany to strengthen the Berlin-Rome axis by breaking up the Little Entente and thus isolating Czechoslovakia. As it happens, Czechoslovakia is also allied to Russia. But the Soviet government is not obligated to come to Czechoslovakia's assistance, should that republic be attacked, unless France also comes to that nation's aid.

The recent tendency in France, therefore, has been to view the Russian alliance with greater favor. But the clinching developments that led the Blum government to reaffirm its determination to continue the Russian alliance were, first, the excellent showing made by Russian planes in Spain and the mounting evidence of Russia's increasing military effectiveness and, second, Joseph Beck's visit to Rumania.

• • • •

About the latter little has appeared in the American press. But in Europe, and particularly in France, it has aroused considerable attention. For, as more than one French observer saw it, Beck had constituted himself as Hitler's traveling salesman to wean Rumania away from the Little Entente and the French camp and join in an anti-Soviet combination.

This may be unfair to Poland's foreign minister. But that is how his visit has been interpreted in Paris. For all its financial and other efforts to restore the Franco-Polish alliance, the French authorities see Poland as still trying to carry water on both shoulders. Once again unsure of Poland, France decided to look beyond Poland to Russia.

The communique issued by Messrs. Litvinoff, Blum and Delbos this week followed in due course. The Franco-Russian alliance stands and there is every reason to believe it will now be strengthened.

A Great Poet Alive?

By William Lyon Phelps.

Masefield Or Yeats?

In the history of literature in all nations and in all centuries, England has been able to show a steady run of genius in creative poetry that surpasses any and all competitors.

From the birth of Shakespeare in April, 1564, till the death of A. E. Housman in April, 1936, there has not been one minute of time when a great English poet was not living. As the late Paul Cohen-Portheim expressed it, "it is always summer in English poetry."

When Shakespeare died in 1616, Milton was alive. When Milton died in 1674, Dryden was alive. When Dryden died in 1700, Pope was alive. When Pope died in 1744, Gray was alive. When Gray died in 1771, Wordsworth was alive. When Wordsworth died in 1850, Tennyson was alive. When Tennyson died in 1892, Kipling and A. E. Housman were alive. When Housman died in 1936, who was left alive?

Well, the Poet Laureate, John Masefield, and the Irish poet, W. B. Yeats. These two men have both written much beautiful poetry, but using the word great in its strictest sense, the sense that means not only perfection of art but defiance of time, how about it? Two hundred years from now, in the year 2137, will the people be reading Masefield and Yeats the way they are now reading any or all of the poets whose names I have just listed? What do you think? What do I think? I don't know. I hope these two men, who have given so much delight to their day and generation, are great poets and that the centuries will prove it. But I am not absolutely sure of it. I am not so sure as I am that Wordsworth and Tennyson are great poets.

And how is it in other countries of the world? Has America got a great living poet? I don't know. France, Italy, Germany, Spain, Belgium, Holland, Poland, Russia, Norway, Sweden, Denmark? What do you think?

Armed Insurrection Doubted As Brazil Prepares For Election

Trouble, However, Expected If Vargas Attempts To Succeed Himself As President; De Oliveira Expected To Be Government Candidate.

Brazil, the United States' largest southern neighbor, where hundreds of millions of American dollars are invested, is preparing for an election to choose a successor to President Getulio Vargas, whose term expires next year. Charles M. Kinsolving, former United Press Bureau manager in Rio de Janeiro, outlines the methods of nominating presidential candidates and the possibility of revolution.—Editor.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, May 21.—Armed insurrection in Brazil as a result of the present political unrest is unlikely unless President Getulio Vargas seeks to perpetuate himself in office after expiration of his four-year term next year.

That is the indication of private advices received here as Brazilian political leaders prepare to meet to select the "official," or governmental candidate for president in the elections next January. The convention will be held Tuesday in Bello Horizonte, under the chairmanship of Gov. Benedicto Valladares of Minas Geraes state.

It is traditional in Brazil for the outgoing president to name his own successor in collaboration with important state leaders. With the exception of the Integralistas, a green-shirted Fascist group, claiming 2,000,000 supporters, and the outlawed Communist Party, there are no national political parties in Brazil. Political lines are drawn between the government and the "opposition."

Took Office in 1930.

Vargas originally assumed office November 3, 1930, following the military overthrow of President Washington Luis. He was elected July 17, 1934, under terms of the new constitution, and during his administration has given the country an efficient, although virtually dictatorial, government.

Recent events in Brazil lead to the conclusion that the real issue at Tuesday's convention will be President Vargas himself. Some political leaders in that country believe he intends to perpetuate himself in power and that he will seek to control the government, if not in his own name, at least, through a puppet president. Influential leaders are opposed to such a move, which they fear may lead to a pseudo-Fascist state.

Political elements forming part of the Liberal Party of Rio Grande do Sul and the Constitutionalist Party of Sao Paulo, both of which states are politically and economically influential, already have attempted to head off any possibility of Vargas' continuance in power by launching the candidacy of former Gov. Armando Salles de Oliveira, of Sao Paulo. It is highly improbable, however, that the convention will nominate Salles de Oliveira as the official candidate. The outstanding preconvention candidate is Jose Americo de Alameida, from the politically unimportant state of Parahyba in northern Brazil.

Alameida Outstanding.

A former minister of communications in one of Vargas' earlier cabinets, Americo de Alameida has a national reputation "beyond reproach."

It is generally conceded that if he is nominated there are only two Brazilians possibly strong enough to defeat him. They are Salles de Oliveira and Oswaldo Aranha, Ambassador to Washington.

A poll recently conducted by Gov. Valladares of 13 of the 20 states in the republic showed 12 for Americo de Alameida and only one for an "opposition" candidate. It is believed his nomination would reconcile rivalries between the states of Rio Grande do Sul and Sao Paulo.

The outstanding political figures besides President Vargas himself are Gov. Flores de Cunha, of Rio Grande do Sul, who recently was displaced as executor of the state of war, or martial law, in his own state, and Juracy de Magalhaes, 30-year-old Governor of Bahia, Brazil's "Old Dominion" state, Magalhaes was elected when only 28. Previously he was the president's representative in Bahia. His administration has been successful and he is much in the public eye. While a strong admirer of Vargas, to whom he owes his political prominence, it is believed any move by the president to perpetuate himself in power might alienate Magalhaes' support.

Flores da Cunha originally was a Vargas man. He participated in the 1930 revolution which put Vargas in the presidency and gained the governorship for himself by riding the president's "band wagon." Like all governors of Rio Grande do Sul, one of the two states in the country which are completely self-sufficient, he has become an "absolute" ruler over a vigorous population of cattlemen, farmers and miners who have predominant strains of Dutch, Huguenot, and German, besides Portugese, blood in their veins. He is opposed to perpetuation of Vargas' regime.

Flores da Cunha controls a strong "private" army, but the federal government has barred importation of arms and ammunition from Argentina and Uruguay by sending troops to Rio Grande do Sul presumably until the political situation clears.

A brief review of Brazilian politics of the past 12 years shows a violent cleavage between the state of Sao Paulo, richest in the country and provider of nearly 65 per cent of the entire national revenues, and the rest of the republic, which Sao Paulo virtually supports.

Minas Geraes sent Arthur Bernardes to the presidency shortly after the World War, in which it fought on the side of the allies. He gave the country an economical government, despite a series of minor uprisings. He was succeeded by Washington Luis, of Sao Paulo. Supremacy of the latter state irked the rest of Brazil, however, and he was ousted by the 1930 revolution which placed Vargas, a native of Rio Grande do Sul, at the head of the republic.

Warren Appointed Speaker Pro Tem Of House for Week

The House yesterday conferred a rare honor upon one of its members, Representative Lindsay C. Warren (Democrat), North Carolina. By resolution, Warren unanimously was named speaker pro tem of the House, during the absence next week of Speaker William B. Bankhead.

Not since 1933, when the late Representative Henry T. Rainey was selected speaker pro tem during illness of the then speaker, Garner, has the House filled the honorary office, although Bankhead himself once named Warren speaker pro tem for a day.

Bankhead is making a commencement address next week at the University of Alabama, and afterward will pass a few days at his home. During his absence, Warren will exercise all of the speakership duties, including the right to sign bills.

Majority Leader Rayburn was recognized by Bankhead for the purpose of offering the resolution. Had Rayburn been named to the post, it would have created a temporary vacancy in the leadership. Warren's selection was believed to place him out front for the next permanent vacancy in the leadership organization.

Current Bill Hits Heights in Contrasting Qualities of Entertainment.

"THE GOOD OLD SOAK." Metro-Goldyn-Mayer picturization of a story and play by Don Marquis, adapted to the screen by A. E. Thomas, starring Wallace Beery, with Una Merkel, Eric Linden, Betty Furness, Ted Healy, Jonet Beecher, George Sidney, Robert McWade and Margaret Hamilton. Directed by Walter Reisch. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Morris.

Wallace Beery's elephantine shoulders carry their heaviest movie burden yet in the portrayal of Clem Hawley, the amiable town drunkard of "The Good Old Soak."

Quite a mess of disputation is going to center about whether Mr. Beery's "Good Old Soak" is the "Old Soak" as originally envisioned by Don Marquis. That little adjective "good," added by M-G-M to the original Marquis title implies all of the oleaginous benevolence which Beery turns on so unremittingly. The Marquis "old soak," if recollection serves, was a tarter critter, but Hollywood has sweetened him up to Hays standards.

With all his fondness for likker, the old soak is a good family man. He just comfortably agrees that he is wrong and everybody else is right—and then goes and gets his bottle out of the chimney or digs it up from under the rose bushes—and has another swig. Husbands who like to step out occasionally with John Barleycorn should see the picture to get pointers on quick comebacks. When Mrs. Hawley accuses Clem of lacking will power, he says: "After 30 years of nagging me to stop drinking, you say I lack will power. What else do you think has made me keep on drinking?" And again, when Clem is put on the spot about spending money on liquor when he has no job, he amiably and truthfully responds: "You don't need money to get liquor. Liquor can always be gotten by those that have the feeling for it."

Pulls Son Out of Hole.

But finally Clem proves that he is really a stout fellow by rescuing his luckless son from the consequences of dipping into his employer's till. In fact, the doughty Clem marches out and makes a banker disgorge the money out of which the Hawley family has been gypped. The show winds up with Clem and his folks enveloped in an aura of happiness and hundred dollar bills.

The quaint Una Merkel, not seen for too long, is no end comical as the Hawley maid-of-all work who likes an occasional snifter along with her boss. Ted Healy, as the town bootlegger; good old George Sidney, as a peddler, and that excellent actress, Janet Beecher, as Mrs. Hawley, all contribute notably. In fact, they, with Mr. Beery, rather overwhelm the younger members of the cast.

Pete Smith contributes one of his best shorts. It's called "Penny Wisdom," and in Technicolor and packed with amazing household hints that are as valuable as Pete is funny. As a sideline to Pete's picture, the theater also offers you a chance to win a new gas range or automatic refrigerator.

The newsreel shows the Japanese Emperor and Mussolini reviewing their tin soldiers, Dr. Eckener looking very sad at the Hindenburg investigation, and Wallis Warfield beaming in her role of the modern Helen of Troy. Ted Husing shines in a short baseball questionnaire.

Whiteman Excels.

Paul Whiteman's superb music makes one forget that his act is not so elaborately devised nor so packed with unique specialty performers as on his last visit.

But perhaps this should not be mentioned when the line-up still includes such top-flight folks as the "Three T's," Jimmie Brierly singing like a lark, Goldie with his golden trumpet, Edwin Davis and Roy Bargy.

One of the more beautiful Whiteman numbers is "Waltzing Through the Ages," which runs the gamut of waltz music from the devivative minuet up to the latest swingy waltz, with the audience breaking into the numbers to applaud a Strauss waltz and the famous "Merry Widow." There is also the Whiteman version of "Liebestraum" and several striking selections of modernistic composition.

Another story of men in white, but distinctly not a carbon of the original of that name, is "Doctor's Diary." Medical ethics and their varying interpretations are the instruments of drama here.

Nurse Hanlon and Resident Doctor Norris are discharged from their hospital for infraction of the holy rules of those who wield the surgeon's knife. The nurse could not understand why a doctor not on a case can not operate in an emergency; the doctor refuses to give false testimony in a trial brought against one of his colleagues guilty of criminal negligence.

To a manicure parlor goes the nurse. The doctor hangs out his shingle with a self-termed "country quack." An infantile paralysis epidemic brings about their return to the hospital, for he had been conducting invaluable experiments with that disease in his hospital laboratory.

Several new faces appear to good advantage, in particular the young violinist whose mother brings the lawsuit against Norris' colleague. Helen Burgess is natural and convincing as Nurse Hanlon. John Trent, former airman, is perfectly at home in the white of Dr. Norris. He will probably attain first-rank rating because he is not overly handsome, neither is he smug. George Bancroft has a bit which is outstanding as the country quack.

Those in the medical profession will particularly like this play, but it is not too technical for the enjoyment of the entire family and the folks next door. No wisecracks, only a tinge of glamour, some philosophy, a good deal of drama, it is a picture which probably will be classed as Class B. But it is sincerely done and can be recommended without a qualm.

Ken Murray and Oswald drag out a comedy called "Male and Female" in which the best thing is the attractive blonde leading lady. There is a colored musical feature about Hawaii and coronation newsreels, which will probably make you gleefully remember standing in the rain on Inauguration Day.

Cappy Ricks Story on Screen at Earle And Lombardo Band Compile Ace Bill

Winninger and Brent Star in Film That Affords Anita Louise Honors.

"THE GO-GETTER." Warner Brothers picturization of a Peter B. Kyne story, adapted to the screen by Delmer Daves, featuring George Brent, Anita Louise and Charles Winninger, with Willard Robertson, Henry O'Neill, Eddie Acuff, Mary Treen, Myrtle Stedman and John Hiraide. Directed by Busby Berkeley. Previewed Tuesday night, May 18.

All of the familiar figures of the Cappy Ricks stories, devised by that nimble penman, Peter B. Kyne, here come to life about as you would like them.

BELL.

"The Go-Getter" is typical of the whole current of the Cappy Ricks fictions. It abounds in humorous touches, has its moments of drama and, of course, fosters a romance that seems to be against the taste of everyone except those participating in it.

The basis of the whole thing is that agreeable device of Kyne's of setting an impossible task for his hero to perform—which, needless to say, the hero always succeeds in accomplishing. In the present instance it is the delivery of a blue vase to his boss by Bill Austin before the departure of a train for parts unknown. He has a very tough time of it, but eventually makes good, with the aid of an airplane and a few thousand dollars that he didn't have!

The picture is not one to arouse profound thought on any vital subject, but has been fabricated purely in the interest of amiable entertainment. That it affords in abundant measure. Unless you are one who "goes along" with the characters in a screen story there is nothing to worry about and no problem to solve—merely a lot of fun while it is being demonstrated, in something of the Horatio Alger manner, that courage overcometh all things, including the lack of a bank account and a seemingly hopeless quest of a girl of vast fortune.

Opens With Macon Shots.

The action of the film opens with simulated views of the destruction of the United States Navy dirigible Macon, in which catastrophe Austin becomes a physical, but not a mental, cripple. It then progresses to his search for a job and his final emergence as the best timber salesman the Cappy Ricks interests ever have had. There is still something to be done on the side of romance and the favor of the boss' daughter. That is maneuvered with about the same finesse that Bill displayed in unloading all of the "skunk spruce" that Cappy had in stock. You will like the spirit of the play and the manner in which it is played.

In the title role, George Brent has the best opportunity that has been afforded him by the casting directors in many months. He gives an earnest, but comically lightened interpretation of the role of Bill Austin that will do much to reestablish him among the first flight of the screen's able leading men. In the opposite role of Cappy's self-willed daughter, Anita Louise, as already has been set forth here, gives further evidence of an expanding ability to cope with roles of divergent character. Her performance is without a flaw, as far as these eyes were able to discern.

The stellar characterization of all in the cast, it must be said, is to be attributed to Charles Winninger, who comes to the role of Cappy Ricks with a full equipment for its fullest exposition. He does a masterful job—comedy, pathos, thundering drama and frivolous by-play all seem to be at the fingertips, so to speak, of this veteran of the boards.

Among the supporting cast, I should say that the best work is done by John Elredge, in the role that originally was assigned to Ricardo Cortez; Willard Robertson, as Capt. Peasley, and Herbert Rawlinson, as Cappy's attorney. The rest do not so much matter.

Lombardo Scores Again.

On the stage at the Earle this week, Guy Lombardo appears with His Royal Canadians, one of the most consistently enjoyable of the large number of prevalent "modern orchestras." It is a melodious and entirely delightful program that this organization presents upon its belated return to the Capital. Carmen, Lebert and Victor—all of the Lombardo clan—do solo bits during the course of the program and two specialty numbers of unusual merit are presented by Gower and Jeanne and Rufe Davis.

This team of Gower and Jeanne represents to me one of the most graceful and most precisely timed dancing acts I ever have had the pleasure of witnessing. They are obviously youngsters, but they have captured the rhythm of the dance beyond anyone I know, with the possible exception of Georges and Jalna. And as for Rufe Davis, he is a singer, comedian, guitarist and impersonator of the first rank. You will see him, I believe, on the screen with Bob Burns and Martha Raye in "Mountain Music," but it would be a friendly suggestion to see him first on the stage of the Earle this week. He is a riot.

The Paramount News' celluloid recording of the coronation, the usual interludes by Freddie Clark's pit orchestra and the welcome announcements of Audrey Sieber, just back from the wars, complete an entertainment upon which nobody could go wrong.

RKO-Keith's

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers seem able to dance themselves into continuous popularity any time they see fit to "pick them up and lay them down" on a sound stage. They are demonstrating that ability again on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, where they entered their third week in "Shall We Dance?" yesterday.

This is a gay and inconsequential story that has many moments of comedy—one that is priceless when Eric Blore carries on a crazy telephone conversation—and is gifted with whistleable tunes. There seems to be not quite enough of Fred's dancing in this latest of his starring vehicles, but what there is is of the top quality, as always.

There is, of course, a love story running through the piece, but it is doubtful if it ever would be noticed. Something is being noticed, however, or the film never would have survived this long.

"The March of Time," probably America's outstanding documentary film, is being held over with the major feature, as are the short subjects and the Pathe News.

Columbia

In "Wake Up and Live," brought back to F street for a repeat engagement, the Columbia Theater this week presents one of the most enlivening of the current filmusicals. It boasts a fine cast, some lilting tunes and a plot basis that happily gets away from the usual radio station-backstage formula.

"Mike fright," an inexplicable thing at best—or worst—is the foundation of the dramatic and romantic movements of the narrative. A young man who can sing is frightened stiff at the thought of approaching a microphone. He breaks up his old vaudeville team and gets himself generally into what is technically known as "a mess." Then by a clever ruse, engineered by a studio artiste, he is converted into the "phantom tenor" of the air—thinking all the time that he is singing over a "dead" mike. Out of that situation they have evolved a considerable picture.

Foremost in the cast are Alice Faye and Jack Haley, as the two who wrangle the microphone into obedience, and after them come Ben Bernie and his band, Ned Sparks, Walter Winchell, Patsy Kelly and a long list of others who lend much life and interest to a celluloid novelty.

The bill is completed by the usual short-reel subjects and News of the Day, dealing principally with the coronation.

Trans-Lux

The medieval splendor of the coronation of George VI and Elizabeth splashes across the Trans-Lux screen this week in a kaleidoscopic pageant that dazzles the eyes and brings to the film cameras for the first time the detailed ritual of acts and symbols that spell "empire." And as a fillip to these scenes of gold coats and antiquated hats Fox Movietone provides a few flash shots of the lady who became the uncrowned queen of romance, Wallis Warfield. The camera caught her on a motoring trip—off to meet the Duke of Windsor and change to his car under the watchfulness of the French gendarmes.

"Manhattan Waterfront" is the cream of American travel shots, presenting a close-up of the bizarre life that lives itself out under the shadow of New York's creamy skyscrapers.

Trans-Lux mixes up the world goings-on in fine measure: Justice Van Devanter comes into the spotlight with his announcement that he will quit the Supreme Court bench and Il Duce celebrates the first anniversary of Ethiopia's downfall.

Golf, the thrill of the Preakness, Dr. Eckener's arrival for the Hindenburg disaster quiz, Al Smith and his derby sailing for Europe, Dick Merrill arriving from Europe after that famous air dash, the United States Fleet on parade and the Jap army honoring the Emperor, the outboard speed race, Spanish War victims arriving in France, and Washington's school track meet at Central Stadium divide news glory.

Ozzie the Ostrich holds down the cartoon spot on the program and Columbia offers a color short on the old and new gold mining operations of California.

Fliers Who Set Record Are Welcomed by Japan

Tokyo, May 21 (AP).—A crowd of 10,000 persons greeted the Japanese fliers Masaaki Iinuma and Kenji Tsukagoshi in the rain today at the end of their record-breaking flight of 25,000 miles to London and back.

Their Romance Annoys Cappy Ricks

Anita Louise, as the daughter of Peter B. Kyne's creation of the shipping tycoon, and George Brent, who portrays the title role, are shown above in an affectionate scene from "The Go-Getter," currently on the screen at the Earle. Charles Winninger, as Cappy, comes dangerously close to "stealing the show" from these two. There is a strong cast in support, including Herbert Rawlinson.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, May 21.—Idol chatter: Mae West has received more than 2,000 mailed proposals from men who see her as a "home girl." Impassee: Claudette Colbert likes to walk in the rain; her husband does not. Even horizontal stripes are not "fattening" enough for Frances Langford's too thin figure. Henry Fonda reminds me of a country boy come to town to sell eggs and butter. Wonder if Will Rogers, jr., will develop his late father's philosophic wit?

MAE WEST.

Joan Crawford's sigh at sight of Greta Garbo's gliding stride is envy; Joan thinks it an art. Peas from the same pod: Ian Hunter and former star Kenneth Harlan. True to his circus trapeze training, Joe E. Brown immediately repeats a dangerous scene that ended in failure (to keep up his nerve). No actor looks more the "beeg silent type" than George Brent. It would not be cricket to name them, but three of our hee-mannest stars are under their wives' thumbs.

Impressionistic drawing of Errol Flynn: Man who read "Lost Horizon" and took it seriously. Spencer Tracy likes the odor of ether. Jack Oakie's elegant crack (at sight of Bing Crosby's awkward horseback riding on-screen): "I never saw a man wear a horse more unbecomingly." Grin alikes: Edward Everett Horton and Hugh Herbert. Ray Milland still patronizes the counter cafe where his meals were "cuffed" when he was a struggler. Sky salaried Fredric March's pet hobby is appearing in Little Theater plays sans salary.

A gang of us at the Masquers Club were talking about the insincerity of Hollywood friendships in general. Ned Sparks chimed in with a lovely little story, slightly old but good. Eight or nine years ago (this is Ned's tale) an extra girl named Nadine Dennis found a hungry kitten in the street. Nadine was lonesome and discouraged that afternoon, and a bond of friendship immediately fastened her to that homeless kitten. She took it to her one-room apartment, fed it, decided to keep it.

She named it Puzzums, and to while away weary evenings she taught it an assortment of tricks. Perhaps through gratitude, the kitten learned quickly. One day Nadine heard that a studio needed a trained cat, and she talked the casting director into giving Puzzums the break. The cat made good, and during the next seven years (it died last year) it worked in 60 pictures.

"That feline earned more than $6,000 for Miss Dennis," said Sparks, "and that's as good a return on a Hollywood friendship as I've ever known."

Clark Gable has a man-Friday, a Negro lad who acts as house boy, valet, chauffeur and general flunky. I chatted with him in front of Gable's dressing room, and knowing that he had previously been employed by Carole Lombard, I asked "How come?"

"Boss, it was like this," he explained, "I was working fo' Miss Lombard all right. But Mist' Gable, he was always over to Miss Lombard's house and I was always doin' things for him. So Miss Lombard, she say ain't no reason for her payin' me to wait on Mr. Gable. So she sent me to his hotel, with a note what say f'um now on, I is on his pay roll."

Shearer Shines In Juliet Role Now at Palace

Film Star Gives Glowing Portrayal of Famous Stage Character.

"ROMEO AND JULIET." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by William Shakespeare, adapted to the screen by Talbot Jennings, starring Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard, supported by John Barrymore, Basil Rathbone, Edna May Oliver, Violet Kemble Cooper, Robert Warwick, C. Aubrey Smith, Andy Devine, Henry Stephen and Conway Tearle. Directed by George Cukor. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

The star-crossed lovers are with us again in a rarely beautiful and deeply moving version of their oft-told tale.

It would be vastly exciting to see this as a new play, bright and shining, all unknown, possessed of the great suspense that it once had, hundreds of years ago, before it became the most famous, most cherished, most quoted play of love. With that experience denied, it is still an event to see it in a new medium. Its people do not live as vividly nor in color and flesh, as they do on the stage, but they live in movement and greater space and in more reality. It seems a fair exchange and an approximate tie. Master Will loved action and his imagination swept broadly over all the world he knew and much he did not know. Indeed, he might almost be accused of writing for the movies, so well do his many shifting scenes fit in this latter-day drama form. No longer is the Capulet balcony a single spot of beauty in an unknown setting, but the loveliest garden in a familiar city, for Hollywood makes Verona known, its back streets, alleys, great houses, open squares and dueling spots. Most of the time this is excellent and effective, removing a speechiness that sometimes appears in more stilted, set and restricted productions, but there are times when camera tricks seem out of order. Close-ups of Juliet in the balcony scene are mistakes, lifting the beautiful lines from their context, shutting Juliet away from Romeo, spoiling the unity of feeling between the two that gives the scene such rarity.

A Proud Production.

The excellence of "Romeo and Juliet" is excellence of the whole. There have been better Juliets—though few lovelier—younger, more fittingly dashing Romeos; brilliant Mercutios who did not need to roll their eyes and "mug," but all together, this is a production to be proud of.

Miss Shearer's Juliet is glowing, young, sweet and ardent. What Leslie Howard's Romeo lacks in fire and youth, he has in sincerity, in voice and reading. Once granted that he is miscast, there can be little fault found with the strength and temper of his playing.

The vigor, the color, for all its black and white shadows, the variety of the production are fine things, the playing of the large cast spirited.

"Romeo and Juliet" should continue its apparently eternal career as the greatest boxoffice attraction ever written, for it tells the most familiar story in the world, a boy and girl in love, better than it has been told before or after.

Belasco.

"The Gods at Play" continue to play for another week, which is not surprising, considering the lavish adjectives which both press and public showered on the French farce.

The gyrations of the plot have to do with Olympian Jupiter's decision personally to investigate a supplication from lovely Alcmene, wife of the Thebian general, Amphitryon. Mercury accompanies the ruler on his earthly jaunt; they take on the physical appearances of Amphitryon and his servant, Soscia, to the dismay of Mercury, who thinks all things mortal have a definitely unpleasant aroma.

Amphitryon returns, suspects himself of madness because of the duplicity; Juno appears in regal wrath to drag the unrepentant Jupiter home to the skies.

The French dialogue is rhythmic; adequate English subtitles aid, if your French is too pedestrian.

Sophisticated, embellished by sterling actors, the play is presented in such a lightsomely amusing manner that the Lunts have marked it for next season.

Contract Bridge

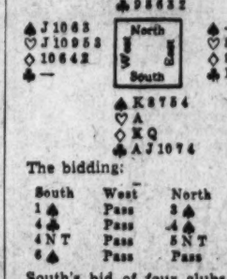
By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

It is not enough to bid a hand to the best contract. The estimate made in the bidding must be justified in the play of the cards. Note South's careful handling of the black suits in today's hand.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 3 ♠ | Pass |
| 4 ♣ | Pass | 4 ♠ | Pass |
| 4 N T | Pass | 5 N T | Pass |
| 6 ♠ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

South's bid of four clubs was an asking bid. Had North held the King of clubs instead of the King of hearts, South would have been able to reach a grand slam. North's response of four spades negatived South's hope for a grand slam and he therefore used the four notrump convention to make sure of his small slam.

West opened the Jack of hearts and South won with the Ace. With normal splits in the black suits south would have no problem. But declarer was not satisfied to play the hand in slap-dash style, and thus leave himself at the mercy of bad breaks.

Considering the trump suit first, he saw that there would not be a loser unless one opponent held all the outstanding trumps. Nothing could be done if they were all in the East hand but to guard against four in the West hand he first laid down the King of spades. His forethought was rewarded when East showed out. He continued with a low spade, West putting up the ten, and dummy winning with the Queen. A diamond to the Queen permitted another trump lead through West, after which dummy's last trump drew West's.

There remained now only the question of restricting the club loss to one trick. Once again there was no danger unless one opponent held all of the clubs. There was a further similarity in that nothing could be done if the wrong opponent held all three, but South invoked the same principle of safety by guarding against three clubs in the East hand. On a low club lead from dummy East properly played low, and South finessed the ten. If the finesse had lost, the Ace would have picked up the only remaining club. Since the finesse held, however, South cashed the Ace of clubs and conceded a club trick, for a well-earned slam.

Soviet Embassy Scene Of Gay Birthday Party

Mme. Troyanovsky Entertains in Honor of Mrs. John Herrick; Guests Give Toasts to Honoree in Several Languages.

By Hope Ridings Miller,

The Soviet Embassy yesterday was the scene of one of the gayest birthday luncheons ever given in Washington.

Mrs. John Herrick—"Geno" to her friends, and Genevieve Forbes Herrick to those who know her name and fame as a former first lady of the press—was the person in whose honor 22 guests sat at a long, exquisitely appointed table in the embassy and ate, and talked, and drank toasts proposed in almost half a dozen different languages.

From first to last it was an informal affair, very much in keeping with a casual invitation extended some time ago by Mme. Troyanovsky. "Come over on your birthday and have luncheon with me," she said to Mrs. Herrick.

When the honoree arrived yesterday, a flock of friends were on hand to greet her with Mme. Troyanovsky, and to wish her "Happy Birthday." Later, at a long table decorated with red talisman roses, the festive spirit took complete possession of the party, as guests discarded their hats and donned the paper caps placed as favors at each plate.

Then toasts to the health and wealth of the honoree were proposed in Russian, Japanese, Turkish, Spanish and English; and the event was climaxed by the cutting of a huge birthday cake covered with icing in Mrs. Herrick's favorite color, lavender. The cake was set off with 16 candles—"which proves Mme. Troyanovsky is a most considerate person," said the honoree.

The hostess was attired in a frock of purple chiffon. Mrs. Herrick wore a tailored grey dress and a purple hat. One of the most attractive costumes glimpsed at the party was of wine-colored chiffon with shirred sleeves worn by Mrs. Louis Caldwell. Mme. Saito, the wife of the Japanese Ambassador, wore an specially attractive blue print.

Among other guests were Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mme. de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador; Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Sam D. McReynolds, Mrs. Donald Richberg and Mrs. J. Fred Essary.

Mrs. McLean's Guests See Coronation

Forty guests of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean last evening had a ringside seat at the coronation.

Shortly after the dinner given at Friendship in honor of Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., a film of "Britain's biggest show" was the featured entertainment. A number of Washingtonians and several persons from out of town probably saw more of the colorful ceremonies last evening than if they had been in London on May 12.

As is always the case with parties at Friendship, decorations for this one were chosen and arranged with an eye to the season and the event. Spring flowers in huge vases added colorful notes to nooks and corners in the drawing room where the hostess received and also in the dining room and on the glass-inclosed porch, which attracted many of the guests after the film was finished.

Mrs. McLean wore a black evening gown cut on simple lines. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Goelet, of New York.

Miss Harcourt Writes About Ceremonies

Speaking of the coronation—though we vowed we wouldn't again—a letter written by Aletha Harcourt, from London, makes us feel the whole story couldn't possibly have been caught by cameras. Miss Harcourt and her sister, Anne, are portrait painters who have spent much time in Washington and have many friends here.

"The procession was simply magnificent," she wrote. "Crowds were standing in the streets before dawn, and we had to be in our seats by 8 o'clock in the morning. * * * There was thunderous applause from the waiting crowds outside as the procession passed. I've just heard that 60 tons of newspapers were cleared from around Oxford street—newspapers that people had sat on for hours on May 12. * * * We are going to the coronation ball tonight at the Royal Albert Hall. The King and Queen will be there in the royal box." All of which makes us hope Miss Harcourt will write another letter.

By the same mail from Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, came a card commenting on "a definitely gay London—and a sunny one, believe it or not." Mrs. Cummings is now on her way to Budapest, where she will visit the United States Minister to Hungary and Mrs. John F. Montgomery. Later in the summer the Attorney General will go to Europe to join his wife.

Selects Wedding Date.

The marriage of Miss Dora Lyndon Hughes and Mr. Richard Smith Wheeler, whose engagement was announced recently by Miss Hughes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Hughes, will take place on Thursday afternoon, June 3, at the home of the bride.

Mrs. Eldon King Gives Luncheon

Chevy Chase Club Scene of Affair; Costumes Described.

Mrs. Eldon King was hostess at luncheon yesterday at the Chevy Chase Club. The large oval table was centered with an artistic arrangement of snapdragons, iris and roses. Mrs. King was wearing a frock of black chiffon combined with lace and a small off-the-face hat of black glossy straw trimmed with a spray of daisies across the front.

The guests included Mrs. Robert E. Lee, in dark blue sheer crepe trimmed with white fagotting and a small narrow brimmed sailor with a cluster of soft red roses at the center of the crown; her cousin, Mrs. Dupont, in a bright print; Baroness von Below, wearing a black and white printed crepe, black milan straw hat banded with white grosgrain and a platinum fox completing her costume; Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby in black, with the circlet of vivid green flowers on her shallow crowned hat just matching her suede oxfords; Mrs. Charles Kappler costumed in beige, and Mrs. Homer Hendricks, in dark blue with a golden camel's hair swagger coat and a cluster of soft chiffon flowers of the two colors trimming her hat.

Among others there were Mrs. William Wheatley, wearing hat and frock of olive green; Mrs. Bruce Wallace, attired in an aquamarine brocaded crepe with widebrimmed hat to match; Mrs. M. Webster Dawley completing her black and beige costume with a widebrimmed hat of burgundy linen and pumps of the same shade, and Mrs. Charles Wright.

Drills to Feature Army Horse Show

Rodeo Ride and Music Drill on Program.

As an extra feature of the Army Relief Horse Show to be held at Fort Myer Gardens at 10 a. m., May 31, the commanding officer, Col. J. M. Wainwright, has directed that several exhibition drills be held in addition to the regular horse show program.

The tremendous demand for Friday afternoon exhibition ride tickets which was impossible to supply has prompted Col. Wainwright to take this action. As a result, he has selected the ever popular and spectacular rodeo ride and the beautifully cadenced musical drill as the feature exhibitions of the show.

The natural amphitheater of Fort Myer Gardens with its ample seating in the shade for all spetcators, will form a beautiful setting for the day's events. The colorful entrance of the troops, at the gallop, from over the distant hill, will form a never-to-be-forgotten picture.

Luncheon will be served by the ladies of the post under the supervision of Mrs. Wainwright, the wife of the commanding officer. The locality will be beautifully decorated and every convenience will be installed to insure the utmost comfort of the spectators.

All proceeds of the show will be donated to the Army Relief Society, an organiaztion devoted to the aid and welfare of Army widows and orphans.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

WHIRLOGRAPHS on the colorful party which Ambassador Fraga gave at the Cuban Embassy Thursday evening—

"William?" (what would Washington do without him?) greeting the arrivals and helping them alight from their motors, saying good evening and missing surprisingly few names (and even then perhaps he was just conserving his vocal energy)—

The crimson carpets looking richer and redder in the mellow light against the snow-white marble steps—

The breath-taking lovely and awe-inspiring vista, seen from the front door, straight on through the lower hall, out across the garden, which was flood-lighted with rainbow lamps to the far side, where a small fountain gurgled and danced in the cool night air—

Up the stairs where the young envoy with Mme. Baron, wife of the Minister Counselor, were receiving on the landing—countless guests lining the balustrade on the second floor just to watch those who came later—

People wandering about utterly bewildered as to what to do, where to begin, there being such a wealth of places to go and things to do—

The ball room (sight of which reminded us of the beautiful wedding of the then Zoe Patterson and Ernest Schlatter)—packed with people chatting and dancing, others looking out of the long French windows at the garden below—

To the garden, flowers, flowers everywhere—a dance floor out in the center gleaming and polished in the light of the moon and flood lights—looking for all the world like a square modernistic lake until discovered by those desiring to dance—

The rhumba dancers and the guests themselves like actors on an elaborate stage affording entertainment to the tenants in the neighboring apartment—all of whom were clustered at their windows, watching and watching. Wonder what some of their choice remarks might have been?—

The Trucco Trio—Rebeca, Chela and Marta—arriving with Olga Patterson (they are so inseparable; what will they do when Olga joins her father in Mexico?) and their quartette of handsome young escorts from the Diplomatic Corps—

Amazing how many luxuriously soft, white fox capes there were present. Mrs. Clarence Grosner nonchalantly tossed hers aside when it became tiresome, just as so much lapin and not paying any attention to it for the rest of the evening—

Romance budding everywhere—one particular example being Marguerita Montero, with her mahogany hair softly waved and tiny ringlets across her forehead, and tall, happy-faced Sebastion Valverde . . . two young people who dance so beautifully together—

Seeing so many of the White House aides there brought to mind the postman on his day off taking a walk—so, these young chaps, deserting their glorious uniforms and trappings for the more comfortable formal black and white—each one of them impressing all listeners with what a grand time they were having out of school as it were—

Diana Rowland, she of the stately stature, with Jack Reybold, of Fort Myer, reminding us ever so much of the pageant held over there in which they took active parts—

Eleanor Campbell, whose arrival was predicted by her mother to be an hour late, finally coming in, wearing one of those soft clinging chiffon creations she always affects and a cluster of lilies of the valley and an orchid nodding from the very top of her sleek dark head—

A certain diplomat standing nearby answering someone's question as to which he considered the ten most important people present—with—"Why, Senators King and Vandenberg, of course, and why count further?"—

Everyone staying on and on and not wanting to leave, going back for a second and perhaps third buffet supper before finally claiming wraps, motors and wending their weary way homeward.

Aldridge Musicale To Close Season

Sol Blooms Give 'Patio Party'

Spanish Type House Is the Scene of Gay Affair.

REPRESENTATIVE and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, entertained at a "patio party" yesterday afternoon. Their Spanish type house on Columbia road boasts a glass covered courtyard with a fountain in the middle, and here the guests gathered. Wistarias, now in full bloom, are trained over the glass roof, and the patio looks out over a shady lawn.

Representative Bloom was a bit late to his own party yesterday, having had to make a speech before the Boy Scouts. As a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, he knows every diplomat in Washington, and naturally there were a great many at his party yesterday. There were Americans, too, including Mrs. John Farr Simmons, with Miss Jane Thurston, who is visiting her and Miss Olivia Stokes; Miss Carolyn Chantry, in a spring print; Miss Elsie Ekengren, and Miss Alice Wilkins, in a navy blue suit with matching hat.

The refreshments served yesterday are worthy of mention. There were tiny round pastries filled with chocolate; little hot sausages on toothpicks; shrimps; pumpernickel sandwiches with a cream cheese filling, and iced tea as well as the usual cocktails.

Among the many diplomats at the party were Mme. Wankowicz, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Polish Embassy, who wore a navy blue suit and matching hat; Mr. Keith Officer, Mr. E. N. R. Trentham and Mrs. Heywood of the British Embassy; Mr. Anthony de Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation; the First Secretary of the Canadian legation and Mrs. Mahoney, and Mme. Champsaur, wife of the Air Attache of the French Embassy.

Historical Body Reviews Activities of Half Century

Dr. J. Freeland Peter Addresses D. C. Branch of Association for Preservation of Virginia Antiquities at Luncheon.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Important work of the Association for the preservation of Virginia Antiquities during its nearly 50 years of existence was summarized for its members yesterday by Dr. J. Freeland Peter, who addressed the annual luncheon of the Washington Branch at the Willard Hotel. Dr. Peter, until recently chancellor of the National Cathedral, was for many years a member of the advisory board of the mother society in Richmond, and is familiar with the broad scope of its activities.

For 39 years the association preserved the foundations of the old capitol at Williamsburg on which the present building was erected, he said. It saved the John Marshall House, in Richmond, when modern buildings threatened to replace it, and restored the Craig House on East Grace street, in Richmond, which was the home of the Helen to whom Edgar Allan Poe dedicated his poem, "To Helen."

The association also is responsible for the preservation of Rolfe House, the oldest brick house standing in Virginia, built in 1642 by Thomas Warren on land given by Chief Powhatan to John Rolfe and Pocahontas. It has also saved the old covered bridge over which Gen. Lee passed on one occasion and over which were brought the remains of Mathew Fontaine Maury, "pathfinder of the sea."

Dr. Peter enumerated many other places which the association had been instrumentla in preserving, so many, in fact, that members were surprised by the extent of the work of their organization.

Mrs. Everard Robinson Todd, president, presided, wearing a black chiffon gown, with a flowered design in which red predominated, and a little cluster of silk poppies at the neck.

Mr. Wade H. Ellis, who with Mrs. Ellis, was also a guest of honor and speaker, gave the history of his country home, Rippon Lodge, which he has restored and opens to interested groups during the week of the Virginia Garden Tour and on other special occasions. The greatest of all Virginia antiquities he designated as the Constitution, "largely written by James Madison, interpreted by John Marshall and adopted at a convention over which George Washington presided."

With the president and guests of honor at the head table were Mrs. Cary T. Graysin, Mrs. L. W. Jennings, of Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Howard Sypher and Mrs. William I. Owens. Spring flowers were used in decoration and were arranged by Mrs. John F. Little, Mrs. Jesse Lee Webb, Mrs. Chauncey Williams, Mrs. Albert Rheinstrom and Mrs. Stuart Walker. Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Joseph Wall had charge of the luncheon.

Among the more than 80 guests were Mrs. Robert Morris Kennedy, Mrs. R. D. LeGarde, Mrs. Thomas Taliaferro, Miss Eva Bell, of Stafford, Va.; Mrs. Wright, of Richmond; Miss Julia Hunt, Mrs. Frank Keefer, Mrs. Howard Hodgkins, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Edward Gibson, Miss Angie Brooke Armat, Miss Laura Dorsey, Miss Luella Chase, Mrs. Lucien Booth and Mrs. Joseph J. Hooper.

The association will make a pilgrimage to Rippon Lodge, Gunston Hall and Pohick Church June 12. Mrs. Joseph Wall heads the committee in charge of arrangements, and Miss Dorsey is chairman of tickets.

MRS. WILLIAM C. VAN VLECK, wife of the dean of the Law School at George Washington University, was elected president of the Faculty Women's Club at the business meeting following the luncheon given yesterday in honor of Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president. The affair, held at Rixey Mansion, in Arlington, Va., with 50 guests attending, was a similar tribute to that paid Dr. Marvin a short time ago in recognition of his tenth anniversary as head of the school.

Mrs. Joseph Roe, retiring president, presided. Other officers elected included Mrs. Loyd H. Sutton, vice president; Mrs. Henry W. Herzog, recording secretary; Mrs. Carl D. Wells, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. Edwin Yocum, treasurer, and Mrs. Roe and Mrs. Thomas B. Brown, directors.

A hammered silver bowl was presented to Mrs. Marvin, who is a past president of the club, by Mrs. Roe in behalf of members as an expression of their esteem. The luncheon in her honor closed the season for the group, which will not meet again until October.

Madame Chairman . . .

By Suzanne

"ONE FLEW EAST and one flew west"—applies in the case of Mrs. Harper Sibley and Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, Washington's only two members of the National Board of Federated Church Women, and their departure from the Capital. Mrs. Sibley left two weeks ago with Mr. Sibley and their family on their return to their former home in Rochester and Mrs. Pugh leaves next month to join Mr. Pugh in California, where they will reside.

The two have been associated for the past year or more at the head of activities carried on by the church women here. They will have a reunion in the summer when Mrs. Sibley goes to the Pacific Coast for a visit and stops in Los Angeles to see the Pughs.

MRS. PUGH is retiring as president of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches and a member of the National Board of Federated Church Women, of which Mrs. Sibley is vice president. She has been a resident of the Capital for 15 years and is reluctant to leave. She has already made friends in her new home, however, for she entertained several Californians in the group of delegates here last winter for the conference of the national board.

She is also a member of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, the D. A. R. and other organizations, but her motto has been "We are first of all church women." On that basis, the membership of the local council has been increased to 4,000, including women of many different denominations and widely divergent interests in other directions. Mrs. Roosevelt is not only a member but has given her active support to several of its projects. Its outstanding piece of work last winter was the Christmas program of a Christmas tree for every alley.

MRS. PUGH is a member of the national board by virtue of her presidency of the local council and will be succeeded to that position by a new president, who will be named next week.

Mrs. Sibley will continue her work with the national organization and is planning to attend a meeting of the executive committee in Indianapolis May 29, at which she will be one of the speakers.

* * * *

MRS. CHAUNCEY WILLIAMS was celebrating a "centennial" of a kind yesterday—the sale at the luncheon of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities of her 100th bronze medal. Eleven years ago she started selling them—little medals coined by the society, bearing the date of its founding, 1888, on one side and on the other, in relief, the three little ships which landed at Jamestown in 1607. She took upon herself the responsibility for selling a few to members at each meeting and yesterday reached the quota she had set.

* * * *

DR. FRANCES MARSHALL, of the board of directors of the Zonta Club, is just back from Richmond, where she attended the Southeastern Congress of Optometrists. From there she went to Williamsburg, where she had luncheon at the Williamsburg Inn with Miss Mary Lindsley, its manager and a "visiting member" of the Washington Zonta Club. When Miss Lindsley—formerly manager of the Dodge Hotel here—left the Capital to take her present position the club was so sorry to have her go it did the nearest thing it could to keeping her—made her a "visiting member."

* * * *

AND, speaking of Zontians—Mabel Strider, former president of the Washington club, planned a little surprise for the 19 members who accompanied her last Saturday to the inter-city dinner in Hagerstown. She was scheduled to make the keynote speech, but she waited until she was introduced to do her talking and not one of her fellow club members knew she was on the program until then. After the meeting, Miss Strider, who is personnel officer of the National Geographic Society, went to Hershey, Pa., for a brief sight-seeing tour with a special view to inspecting the Industrial High School.

P. E. O. 'At-Home.'

The officers of the District of Columbia Chapter, P. E. O. Sisterhood, will be at home tomorrow from 4 to 7 p. m. at the home of Dr. Ella R. Fales, 1210 Grace Church road, Woodside, Md. The reception is for all members of the P. E. O. and their husbands, whether or not they are affiliated with local chapters.

Women Voters Choose Officers

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg Heads Slate for League's Election.

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, who has been nominated for president of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters, heads the list of officers to be voted on Tuesday in the A. A. U. W. clubhouse at 6:30 p. m.

Other nominees include Mrs. Robert F. Leonard, vice president; Mrs. Christopher Granger, treasurer, and Mrs. Jesse Adkins and Mrs. Edward Costigan, directors.

Mrs. William Kittle, president, will preside, and members of the six departments will report on the year's work. A departure from the usual procedure will be reports on various phases of the activities of each department by members of the study groups instead of the usual single report by each chairman.

Invited as guests of honor are: Senator and Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Mr. Ross Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Street, Mr. and Mrs. John Keady, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Seal and Dr. and Mrs. George C. Ruhland.

Dance Is Planned By Jewish Juniors

Plans for a dance June 6 at the National Women's Country Club in Bethesda are being made by the Washington section of the National Council of Jewish Juniors. It will be in honor of the girls who earned money for the Dorothy Goldsmith Recreation Fund, and Miss Goldie Rosenberg is chairman of the committee in charge.

The Washington section is headed by Miss Betty K. Shapiro, who was elected president for another year. Other officers elected for the 1937-38 term are: First vice president, Miss Goldie Bachman; second vice president, Miss Sarah Gilden; recording secretary, Miss Bella Schwartz; corresponding secretary, Miss Rose Zuckerman; treasurer, Miss Gertrude Yaffee; auditor, Miss Jeanette Rod; chaplain, Miss Irene Hirsch; directors, Miss Blanche Alloy, Miss Hattie Flax and Miss Paula Starr; delegate to the tenth biennial convention, Miss Bachman, and alternates, Misses Jeanette Naiman and Mae Ponorow.

California State Society Gives Breakfast Today

The California State Society will hold its last spring breakfast today at 12:30 p. m. at the Shoreham Hotel, with Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, president, presiding. Several members of the California Congressional delegation, as well as many prominent Californians in Washington, have made reservations.

Textiles Exhibit To Open Monday

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of sponsors for the exhibit of handwoven textiles, assembled from original sources, by Miss Lou Tate, regional representative at the Folk Arts Center, in New York City, which will be given at the studio of the League of American Pen Women at the Grafton Hotel, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The exhibit will have other handmade Kentucky articles besides the bedspreads and quilts, which will constitute the main part of the exhibition.

A group of modern designs based on Guatemalan stitches done by Miss Tate also will be included. In contrast, there are other groups of coverlets in peacock or classic designs. All are individually designed and have no duplicates.

At the rendezvous tea, which will be given on Wednesday in connection with the exhibit, Mrs. Delos Blodgett will be the hostess, from 2 to 6 p. m.

Sorority to Give Dance At Country Club Tonight

Sigma Tau Gamma Sorority will hold its spring dance this evening at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club following its banquet. Dancing will be from 10 until 1 o'clock. The committee on arrangements includes Miss Carl Louise Johnson, chairman, with Miss Joan Kenealy and Miss Mildred Duckett assisting.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Publicly Humiliated by Unwarranted, Jealous Rages of Fiance, 32, Girl of 21 Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been engaged for nine months to a man of 32. I am 21. The wedding day was set for August 20. With the exception of about 3 days out of every 60, this man is kind, honest, hard-working, thoughtful and considerate of everyone. But during his "off days" he explodes in tantrums, expresses a desire to get drunk, says he never wants to see me again, etc. Nevertheless, and in spite of this, I still believe he would make a fine husband and I consider myself fortunate to have his love.

* * * *

After these spells wear off he is again his same happy self, offers profuse apologies, reaffirms his love and swears it will never happen again. But so far, it has continued to happen, and his last tantrum was extremely painful for all concerned. Sometimes I have thought his tantrums could be explained and excused on the ground of his intense devotion to me, which makes him extremely jealous. But I am not sure.

* * * *

He does not want me to work because of the men I would have to be cordial to. However, it is necessary for me to work. Recently I secured a very good position. This angered him. However, just when I had gotten him reconciled to the idea, we were dining out one evening when my employer happened to enter the room. Naturally he spoke to me. My fiance literally exploded. In the presence of some dozen guests, all within hearing, he accused me of keeping company with my employer, of "stepping out" with other men, and a few other things I would never consider doing—particularly while engaged.

* * * *

I was very humiliated and asked to be taken home immediately. He obliged, but when he said good-night, he also said good-by. He said that so far as he was concerned our engagement was finished; that he didn't want me to speak to him in future; that he didn't care to know me and that he hated liars. In leaving, he said he still loved me but was done with the past. Don't you think this was very childish?

* * * *

I am terribly heartsick and disappointed, for I love him, and my world seems to be crumbling around me. My parents are very hurt, and so are his, as well as ashamed, and our friends can't understand him. What must I do? Sometimes the desire to go to him is so strong that I can hardly resist, and yet I know the first move is up to him, for he is entirely at fault. He never said such things before, and I am lost as to what to do. Should I continue my daily visits to his home and should I converse with him?

* * * *

I gave him the ring and took back some pictures of mine, but I still have his pictures and a lovely and expensive watch he gave me after our engagement was announced. I offered them to him and he exploded again. He said he never took back gifts he gave in love and appreciation, or in free will and friendship. What shall I do with them? I don't want to give him up. I love him dearly, but such scenes as this, combined with constant uncertainty and the fear of being cordial even to men friends of long standing is wearing my nerves to a frazzle. Your advice will be appreciated and followed.
Sincerely yours, GAY.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR GAY: I wonder if you really will have the strength to follow my advice? I hope so. For much as you might like to believe the contrary, it is the only common sense, self-respecting, self-preservative thing to do. The man's outrageous conduct is not to be lightly or indulgently dismissed as "childish." It borders on the psychopathic. His jealousy, suspicion and ugly accusations are not so indicative of intense devotion to you as they are suggestive of potentially dangerous hallucinations. And if they do not threaten you with physical harm, at least they embrace the possibility of social ostracism for both of you—if you continue with him.

* * * *

Even your oldest and closest friends, men and women alike, out of very pity for you and respect for themselves, would be obliged to avoid social contact with a man who is known to explode in jealous rage at your chance word or smile or glance, rending the air with wild, outlandish accusations of the innocent and unaware. And though you may "love him dearly" today, no modern American woman's love for a man is so all-compensating that she can happily live the life of a harem inmate in order to placate him.

* * * *

Barely out of adolescence, you are far too young and socially inexperienced even to guess what a hell your life might be, married to such a man. Already he has frazzled your nerves, cowed your spirit and so nearly broken your pride that you can "hardly resist . . . the desire to go to him." My advice to you is to second with pointed emphasis his statement that the engagement is off and to refuse absolutely to have anything more to do with him.

* * * *

Return his photographs and engagement gift by mail, with a note to the effect that his inexcusable conduct has made them unhappy reminders of an unfortunate relationship which you prefer and propose to forget. Discontinue your daily visits to his home, by all means; although you may, if you wish, make what amends you can to his family by explaining that the engagement has been irrevocably broken through no willful fault of yours, and that while you may not see them so often in future, you expect always to hold them in respect and esteem.

* * * *

Some day when you love and are loved by a really fine, mentally and emotionally balanced man, you will go down on your knees in thankfulness that this one showed his hand in time to prevent your laying waste your life. M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem.

If office conditions provoke free-and-easy social association after working hours, between married men executives and their stenographers and private secretaries, deans of women are needed in the business world "to plant danger signals" for both sexes, married woman says. Her letter will be published here tomorrow. This column appears Sunday as well as daily.

Tomato Skin Removal.

To remove skins from tomatoes, place the tomatoes on a fork and hold them over a fire. Turn them constantly until the skin becomes slightly charred or bursts. (About two minutes will be long enough.) The skin may be removed then with a sharp knife. The amount of heat will not affect the firmness or flavor of the tomato.

Cotton Lace in New Versions for Summer

Smart Costumes for Summer Now Are Featuring Lace Fabrics

By Ethel Ehlen.

NEW YORK, May 21.—Lace definitely has stepped out of the exclusive dinner and dancing class and is appearing this summer in smart costumes for daytime and business. Moreover, it is an entirely new kind of lace that is appearing to lend coolness and chic to torrid summer days. Cotton laces, which are copies of rare old patterns and delightfully soft in texture, are much in evidence; and they are as comfortable as they are ultra-smart.

With the new informal lace materials, comes a variety of new ideas in styling. In some instances, the lace is used alone without any kind of trimming—depending upon line and the loveliness of the fabric for effectiveness. In other instances, the cotton lace merges with contrasting materials for startling and novel style dramatization. Lace for general wear is one of the most amazing and popular of materials sponsored for the entire summer season.

Redingote Is Popular.

The redingote of lace over taffeta or satin, is an effective way of using a striking cotton lace pattern. Many of these were noted throughout the various summer collections. The color scheme for this is enevitably white, natural or beige, over a black foundation slip. The one-piece dress of cotton lace, simply cut in a soft tailored manner, is also popular; for this styling, there is usually a parade of brilliant glass buttons down the entire front of the garment.

Two-piece frocks of lace, the monotone color theme being relieved or dramatized in many instances by an ascot-like scarf of brilliant contrasting tone, are smart for business and afternoon. Such as poudre blue lace with deep wine; black with white or nasturtium tints; beige with flame or chartreuse; grey with black or bright blue; white with black or dusty pastel tints. Other two-piece versions have high necklines and are made in jacket fashion; color can be introduced in these models if desired by suede or patent leather belts of dark or brilliant color tones.

Versatile and Practical.

Besides being exceedingly smart and versatile, cotton laces are very practical. They do not wrinkle easily, which makes them as ideal for summer wear as for traveling. They can be packed and then simply hung up in a clothes closet for a time, and they are already to don again without any pressing. Another interesting feature, cotton laces launder well and easily; a necessity for summer materials, particularly in places where the temperature soars.

A cotton lace frock of good lines, worn with well-chosen accessories, can go anywhere. It is equally appropriate for the office, the boat trip, afternoon teas, luncheons, club meetings, the matinee or concert. Such a costume can then go on to informal dining and dancing and other casual evening affairs that do not require "dress up" clothes. For best results, that is, if one expects such a frock to serve for all occasions and last throughout the summer season, a good quality of lace should be chosen. Obviously, it wears and launders better than a very inexpensive version. However, there are many inexpensive models which are smart and well made, and serve beautifully for that extra costume needed in all summer wardrobes.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 21.

THE OTHER DAY I sat in at a profound conference on the subject of household help—its care and feeding, its cause and cure—and if there is one matter that confounds and befuddles American womanhood more than this, I can't think of it. The problem of the Dictator in the Kitchen is endless and insoluble, save to certain miraculous women who trot about bragging about their Katies who have been "with them for 16 years, and never cracked a cup!" I look upon such ladies with a bilious eye, as I do upon those who boast they have never scuffled with their husbands!

ALICE HUGHES.

This pow-wow was run off by various high-powered women from such agencies as the Y. W. C. A., State and national labor departments and clubs. Miss Mary V. Robinson made a good point when she said that houseworkers of the better type have been shy of such work because they have been unprotected by legislation save in the States of Wisconsin and Washington. I liked best the speech of Mary Brown, a Philadelphia college graduate driven into domestic service by the depression, who said, "When the girl respects her job, and the mistress treats her housemaid as a business woman treats her secretary, household employment will become an attractive profession which efficient girls will enter."

* * * *

In short, "right treatment" seemed to be the crux of the matter, according to the confab. And I concur—don't you? Certainly the day of the "slavey" has been gone for years. Yet there remains the crucial matter of personnel. Where are these efficient girls going to come from, at present, with business offering our bright youngsters much more? If you know, you'll be a national seeress!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The craze for tropical fish continues unabated among our citizens, which has brought Miss Ida Mellen to the fore. She is probably the only feminine professor of fish ills in the country—one look and she knows whether the guppy has a head cold or bunions. She says one of her greatest discoveries is that our finny friends are definitely not smart. She learned this by teaching a starfish to turn somersaults. For 18 days, 10 times a day, the poor fish did the trick—but after a week's holiday, it forgot all about it. That is Miss Mellen's story. I think that the starfish simply didn't like to turn somersaults. But then, I'm not a fish doctor . . .

* * * *

If you think of trailering in to our world's fair in '39 you will be taken care of in high style. Up in the vast reaches of the Borough of the Bronx the city papas are going to lay out a 300-acre trailer camp, with room for 8,000 rolling homes. It will cost a mere $3,000,000, but that is a bagatelle in these parts, it seems.

* * * *

The way some people go at book-learning is a constant wonder to one who lost a long fight with plane geometry many years ago. Take our Mrs. Rose A. Cahan, known on the Columbia campus as the college grandmother. She never went to high school—but way back in '21 she started taking courses at Columbia, and a decade later became a bachelor of science. All this time she was seeing children through school and maintaining a good home. Next month she will step up and receive an M. A.—16 years of study, two degrees, a happy home, a loving husband and offspring, and a grandchild. Such things simply floor me; don't they you? And darned if she isn't going back to school next fall! "So much still to learn," says Rose. My gosh!

* * * *

The racing at Belmont, our only classy track really recognized by "society," has brought out the usual assortment of elegant spring clothes. I think the highlight so far has been furnished by Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, who verges on the spectacular. Mrs. M., on opening days, broke out a gown and and hat of Scotch plaid—and the tartan was that of the fine old Highland family of Queen Elizabeth of England! I tell you—no common old tartans for our fancy folk at Belmont!

Pendulum Earrings Back in Style Again In Various Shapes

Paris (U.P.).—Pendulum earrings are back in style again and they appear in every imaginable shape and design in either gold or silver. The scales of justice are reproduced in gold on a fine chain and are so perfectly adjusted that the earrings remain stable. Another amusing design is a reproduction in silver of the original Montgolfier balloon. Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier were the French brothers who invented the first balloon in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Four-branch candelabra are used for another type of earrings, while still others are designed like three-masted schooners. Silver eagles in flight make other pendulum earrings.

Button earrings still are popular and are shown in all sorts of unusual shapes. Old French gold pieces are considered smart and can be repeated as buttons down the front of a spring dress. The cut-out shapes that twist about both sides of the ear in the shape of plumes, crescent moons or wreaths of flowers are shown.

How to Plan Your Wedding

QUESTIONS of wedding etiquette! Of expense! Of taste! A hundred-and-one puzzlers to harass the bride.

If your wedding is to be an enchanting vision of loveliness, you must smooth out all these problems beforehand.

Who buys your bouquet? The bridegroom, with you to help choose it.

Must you send both invitations and announcements? No. You may omit one or the other. To a large wedding you may send engraved invitations to "every one" and no announcements. To a small wedding you may ask close friends verbally or by note; send engraved announcements to the friends and acquaintances you don't invite to the ceremony.

Who gets the first slice of wedding cake? You, to share with the bridegroom.

What to give your bridesmaids? Perhaps their slippers. Or a lace handkerchief, monogrammed. A piece of jewelry or a vanity case.

Where to seat relatives at the ceremony? Yours on the left of the aisle; his on the right. The front pew, left, is for your mother and father; the front, right, for the bridegroom's mother and father.

What music? The stately rhythm of the wedding march from "Lohengrin's" has just the right tempo for the processional. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" is the usual choice for the recessional.

Our 40-page booklet, "How to Plan Your Wedding," lists other music appropriate for your wedding. An authoritative guide to settle who pays for what, points of etiquette, correct attire at formal or informal weddings. Menus and manners for receptions and breakfasts, too.

Send 15c for our booklet, "How to Plan Your Wedding," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Resuscitation.

IN THOSE accidents in which respiration has ceased, the primary first aid treatment is to restore it. These circumstances are drowning, electric shock from live wires, and carbon monoxide poisoning from the exhaust of motor cars.

All other methods for treatment of shock, etc., can wait upon this.

Remember that a drowned person stops breathing, not on account of the water in his lungs, but from the shock of water hitting the lung surface. He may breathe in a very small amount of water and still stop breathing. It is unnecessary, therefore, to go through the old procedure of rolling the patient to get the water out of him. The thing to do is to start his breathing.

It may not be known that our methods of artificial respiration are based upon long and elaborate experiments. Many of these have been conducted and financed by such institutions as the American Gas Co., the National Electric Light Association and the Royal Life Saving Society of Great Britain.

The earliest method, perhaps, was that of Marshall Hall, in which he recommended that the victim be moved alternately from a position lying on his face to a position lying on his side. A little later Silvester used the method which most people, at least of my generation, know. The patient is placed on his back and the arms forcibly raised over the head, pulling the ribs out laterally to produce inspiration, and then bringing the arms down and compressing the abdomen to produce expiration.

All Boy Scouts, gas and electric light employes, and life guards, now are taught, however, the prone pressure method, introduced about 1890 by Prof. Schafer of Edinburgh.

The prone pressure method of artificial respiration is to place the victim on his face with one arm curved under so that his forehead can rest on it; this brings his mouth and nose away from the ground and allows free breathing. The other arm is stretched on the ground over his head. The operator now rests on his knees, astraddle of the patient, and first brings his two palms down on the side of the ribs toward the far end and most compressible part of the thorax. He presses these together and then springs back, taking his hands off the chest, which allows air to come in.

The advantages of the prone pressure method are that it can be done by one operator almost indefinitely without tiring him. Second, that with the patient on his face it insures that the tongue will fall forward, allowing a free passage of air. Third, that it makes the largest amount of air go in and out of the lungs.

Remember with artificial respiration that people have been revived after four hours of work, even when they were blue and apparently completely lifeless.

Girl Graduate Is Urged to Use Care in Makeup

Posture Also Should Be a Major Concern, Says Beauty Expert.

By Carolyn Abbott.

HOW shall the girl graduate make the best appearance on the platform? This is a question of increasing importance to members of the younger set as commencement time approaches.

Besides having a pretty and becoming dress, the young graduate must see to it that her make-up is appropriate to the occasion and that her posture is one of youthful ease and grace.

Too much make-up should be avoided by the girl graduate, for above all, she wants to appear fresh and youthful, and too much paint and powder may make her features appear hard and worn. However, she may apply more color to her cheeks than she would for a June-week dance, for at graduation she will not have close-up views from admirers, and the strain and fear of walking across the platform may cause all of the natural color to vanish from her face. In selecting cosmetics for this occasion, she should be sure that they are matched so the effect after they have been applied will be natural.

Youth Is Stressed.

Senior girls no longer consider themselves older than their friends of lesser knowledge. Especially when they dress their hair for dances, for they stick demure little nosegays in with their curls—if their escorts furnish flowers, and wear as fussy coiffures as ever. This season, long bobs and ringlets are in evidence and hair is halo-curly under mortar-boards. Page-boy coifs are neglected by this year's graduates. They are left for city girls.

One of the most important things to the girl graduate is her platform grace. When she steps forward to receive her diploma, she finds herself for the moment the center of the audience's attention. The general impression she makes—the one the audience will carry away—is most important.

Facing a commencement audience is a similar problem to one the young graduate will meet increasingly in social life. It is similar to entering a ballroom, going down a reception line at a tea or being introduced in any public place. The first thing to be remembered in facing it is to shed self-consciousness.

Be Self-Confident.

Many timid girls, especially those who are tall, are inclined to come forward shrinkingly, apologetically, often with drooping shoulders. Other girls are inclined to slouch. And still others are a little too swaggering and militant. A short girl, trying to appear taller, thrusts her chin out belligerently. In any case, an easy, graceful carriage would make observers forget height faults.

Perhaps the graduates of the last generation learned to hold their shoulders back by the broomstick cure. The stick pinned the elbows back and helped the shoulder position, but this made the chin shoot forward and out of position. A trapeze bar is better. Stand flat on the floor, raise the hands above the head, grasp the bar firmly. Pull in the stomach. The hips and shoulders will then automatically adjust themselves. It would be a good plan for a girl graduate to practise platform posture in advance, before her mirror. Above all she should learn to relax, to walk with ease and the lightness of touch that is characteristic of youth. One of the best tests is for her to watch her feet as she walks down the street. If the tips of her shoes are not visible when she bends her head, she scores 100 per cent.

CAPITAL MANNERS

Brides' Showers Should Not Be Arranged by Relatives.

By Margaret Wallace

ARE SHOWERS for prospective brides in good taste? Is it proper for the members of the bride's family to organize them for her? These questions are in the mail of this department frequently with the approach of the June wedding season.

While the "shower" is not a fashionable function from the viewpoint of those who belong to the socially prominent circles of Washington, custom has made them acceptable social entertainments, provided they are conducted according to the rules of good form.

Some persons feel an aversion to a shower party, to which guests are invited and are expected to bring a gift. Therefore, one of the chief essentials in making plans for the party is to be sure that the bride-to-be, for whose benefit the party is to be given, approves of such functions. Such a party should never be organized or even suggested by members of the bride-to-be's family. Some of these shower parties are given in the form of surprise parties, and the guests arrive laden with gifts at the home of the bride-to-be, with the consent of her mother or other members of the family. It is better taste, however, to give such shower parties at a friend's home or at a club and invite the bride as the guest of honor.

This form of pre-nuptial entertainment should always be a girl's party. The prospective bridegroom and men friends should never be included.

For the bride-to-be who does not like the idea of a shower party, the girls who wish to honor her in some way and give her some present for her trousseau may give a dinner or luncheon in her honor and send engagement presents beforehand.

QUERY—My employer's wife has arranged a shower party for me at a club. She has invited all the girls in the office, but has not asked my sisters or mother. Do you think I could suggest that my sisters and mother be invited as they would very much like to be present? I would also like the sister of my fiance. When I wrote my note of acceptance for the invitation, I mentioned that my mother and sisters were also grateful for the kindness to me and that I was sure she would like my fiance's nice sister. Since that time my employer's wife has sent little notes to every girl in the office inviting them to the party, but she has not sent any to my mother and sisters and my fiance's sister.

ANSWER—It would be very bad form to ask your employer's wife to include your mother and sisters and the sister of your fiance in her party. Since you mentioned them in your letter to her, she knows about them and would invite them if she cared to. She probably desires to keep the guests at the party to those in her husband's office. This is her privilege and quite good form.

New Hollandaise Sauce Is Foolproof

Hollandaise sauce is a perfect dressing for the seasonable cauliflower. Time when this sauce was only successful when carefully made by an expert, but now, because of late scientific inventions in foods, it is a simple process to make perfect sauce by using ready prepared salad dressing. Hollandaise is a good accompaniment for other spring vegetables, too

Simple Hollandaise Sauce Is Ideal for Cauliflower

Dressing Also Enlivens Beans, Cabbage, Spring Greens and Other Vegetables; It's Easy to Make in Modern Manner.

By Rebekah Blake.

CAULIFLOWERS that bloom in the spring take a special dressing to preserve their delicate spring-like goodness. A Hollandaise—one of the simplest but most aristocratic of all dressing inventions which have come to the mind of gifted chefs—is the perfect answer, for cauliflower, and for all the vegetable family this time of year.

So delicate of flavor, so piquant and subtle is this sauce, much venerated by the world's great cooks, that it is a pity it is not used more frequently on home tables. Perhaps the reason why it hasn't been used more is that most housewives have the idea that Hollandaise is very difficult to make.

Originally, the preparation of this sauce was quite a trick, involving the blending of eggs, oil and lemon juice, each ingredient added with mathematical precision, at the exact moment of cooking. In the hands, and under the careful eye of an expert, the resulting hot sauce was smooth and succulent. But when made by those less expert, it was sometimes a lumpy, discouraging concoction — not worthy of the name.

A hurry-up Hollandaise in the modern manner is simple. The secret is to use a prepared salad dressing, available in every market, as the basis. Salad dressing, which is a combination of old-fashioned boiled dressing and mayonnaise thoroughly blended before it reaches you, removes the hazards of Hollandaise making. Heat a cup of salad dressing in a double boiler over hot water, let this mixture stand for ten minutes without boiling—then add two tablespoons of lemon juice, mix well—and there you have the finished product.

Few sauces that take so little trouble in making give such ample rewards in dressing up hot vegetables as the modern style Hollandaise. Both light and tempting, the sauce accents the delicate flavors of the vegetables themselves as it adds a mild but unmistakable character of its own.

Serve Hollandaise over a head of hot cauliflower, over broccoli, green beans, cabbage or any one of the tender spring greens which do so much to enliven springtime menus and appetites.

Cauliflower Polonaise.

1 medium head cooked cauliflower
¼ cup melted butter
½ cup dry bread crumbs
1 tablespoon minced parsley
2 tablespoons grated cheese or
1 hard-boiled egg yolk
Salt
Pepper

Cook crumbs in butter until golden brown; add parsley, cheese or sieved egg yolk; season with salt and pepper. Place cauliflower in a serving dish; sprinkle the seasoned crumb mixture over the top.

Curried Cauliflower.

Place cooked flowerets or cooked whole cauliflower in a serving dish. Pour tomato curry sauce over the head.

Tomato Curry Sauce.

2 tablespoons fat
1 small onion, diced
1 tablespoon curry powder
1 tablespoon cold water
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup tomato pulp
Few drops Worcestershire sauce
Four drops Tabasco sauce

Cook the diced onion in the fat over low heat for about ten minutes; the onion should not brown. Stir the water into the curry powder to form a paste and add to the fat and onions. Stir in the remaining ingredients and cook slowly for five to ten miutes so that the flavors will blend.

Cauliflower With Peas.

Cook a small head of cauliflower whole; place in the center of a shallow serving dish; pour melted butter over the head. Surround with a border of buttered green peas.

Men's Interest In Cooking Art Gains Steadily

THAT COOKING is becoming increasingly a fad with men is revealed in the interest housewives are showing in the radio program of "The Mystery Chef."

This mysterious broadcaster who presents a cooking program twice weekly on a national network is not a professional chef but a yachtsman, horseman and business executive. He has been married for 25 years. His wife has yet to cook her first meal. Whether there are guests for dinner or not, he prepares, cooks and serves the meals himself.

The mystery man always has enjoyed cooking and now hides his identity in respect to his mother, now dead, who objected to cooking as a hobby for her boy.

The original recipes of "The Mystery Chef" are causing wide comment among housewives throughout the country. He is the author of the cookbook, "Be an Artist at the Gas Range," which contains interesting recipes and valuable cooking hints.

Suet Is Best Preserved By Melting It for Jar

All housewives know that suet, exposed to the air, becomes unfit for use within a short time; even though in an icebox.

The next time you buy suet, melt it in the oven, then pour it into sterilized glass jars. When cold, it is more easily shredded and will keep much longer. Moreover, you will be able to see at a glance through the transparent walls of the handy jar just how much suet you have on hand.

U. S. Suggests Fitting Garb For Children

Simplicity Is the Keynote of New Juvenile Clothing.

IN BUYING junior's—or sister's—clothes, don't choose garments because they are "cute." Don't buy them because you like a certain little collar or ruffle. Above all, don't buy those that have too many buttons.

The first question to ask in choosing a child's garment is, 'Can he put it on and take it off himself?" This point is emphasized by child psychologists who point out that the best means of developing self-reliance in children is to train them to dress themselves.

Things to Check.

The United States Children's Bureau suggests that parents in buying a child's clothes also ask themselves the following questions:

Can he play freely in them?

Are they warm enough—but not too warm?

Do they allow freedom for his body, for growth, circulation of the blood and muscle activity?

Do they allow him to stand well? Sit comfortably? Stoop, bend, reach, stretch easily?

Are they put on and taken off easily, and managed without difficulty at the toilet?

Will they wash and wear well?

Desirable Features.

As a result of studies made by the Children's Bureau, the Home Economic Bureau and clothing manufacturers, the following 12 points have been accepted as desirable in children's clothing:

1. Front openings whenever possible.

2. Large openings to permit the garment to be slipped on or off without difficulty.

3. Buttons and button-holes large enough to be manipulated by awkward little fingers.

4. Mechanical fastenings are desirable because they can be opened and closed with a swish in a single stroke. These may be managed by a child from the age of 2 up.

5. Simplified styling: Eliminate any details which complicate the garment, such as separate belts which may come unstrung, the needless fly opening, and the center-back button on boys' suits which the young child cannot reach.

6. Drop-seats are an important feature of all self-help suits and underwear.

Long Blouses Essential.

7. On boys' suits, back of blouse should be long enough to avoid gaping when the child stoops over. On underwear, the "shirt tail" should be so shaped as to allow plenty of seating room without being bulky.

8. Seat opening (determined by depth of side placket) should be wide enough so that the child may sit down at the toilet without difficulty.

9. Blouse tail, if properly shaped at sides, laps under the placket opening to prevent gaping when the child is playing or stooping over.

10. Seat of suits should be so constructed that when the child wants to bring it back in place, he needs only to pull the belt ends together and fasten the buckle.

11. Front belt buckle on many suits is adjustable for different waistline measurements without sewing. Adjustable shoulder straps on play suits are desirable for fast-growing children.

12. Legging sets and snow suits need especially to be roomy in crotch and seat without bulk around the waistline.

Hot-Water Bottle Puts Wailing Puppy to Sleep

Have you ever been kept awake at night by the dismal wailing of your lonely puppy? The solution? Just fill a quart fruit jar with very hot water, replace rubber and lid, wrap in several thicknesses of newspaper and place in the puppy's bed. He will snuggle up to the hot-water bottle, give a sigh of contentment and go to sleep.

Caps of Milk Bottles Used to Grease Pans

For greasing cake tins, cookie sheets or griddles, nothing can excel ordinary milk bottle caps, washed and cut square on two sides so that you can get the grease into the corners of square pans easily. The little tab gives you something to hold on to and the caps can be thrown away after using.

Tea sandwiches are the subject of this week's recipe contest, which has five cash prizes for the winning recipes. These prizes are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

You may have as your pet ribbon sandwiches, deviled ham, rolled cheese and watercress, cornucopia sandwiches, date bread with cream cheese, nut and celery, rolled carrot or chopped mushroom sandwiches. Or you may be fond of your recipe for strawberry sandwiches, sardine sandwiches, open-faced cheese or chicken snacks, pinwheel or window or iced sandwiches, checkerboard sandwiches or deviled egg or cucumber or anchovy sandwiches.

COOKING HINTS

Juice left from spiced fruits makes an excellent basting liquid for chops or roasts. It is especially tasty when used on ham.

To cut fancy cakes from a layer cake without using a special cutter, make a cardboard pattern of the desired shape and, placing it over the cake, cut around it with a sharp knife.

Adding a teaspoon of lemon juice to the water in which rice is boiled will insure whiter, fluffier rice.

Try placing pineapple rings in the bottom of the pan in which you bake ham loaf, spiced peach halves beneath a veal loaf, cinnamon apple slices beneath a combination meat loaf. Serve upside down.

An easy way to chop nut meats is to place the nuts in a paper bag and roll the rolling pin over the bag. This breaks the nuts quickly without scattering them.

You'll find your baked shortcake much easier to split in layers if you divide the dough into two parts, fit one portion in the pan and brush with melted butter; then top with second layer of dough and bake.

Lettuce leaves for salads can be decorated attractively by dipping the tips of the leaves in a bowl of water over which a little paprika has been sprinkled.

Baking Brings Out Flavor of Fruits, Gives Menu Zest

Do you ever look around for something extra to put in the oven on baking day? Baked fruits have a luscious flavor, so perhaps your choice will be a pan of apples, or a casserole of prunes, or a combination of two or more fruits. You'll enjoy the baked fruit recipes which follow:

Baked Prunes.

2 cups uncooked prunes
3 cups water
Or 1 pound prunes (approximately 3 cups)
4½ cups water

Rinse prunes and add water. Bake in a covered dish for 2 hours in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit). Allow to cool before removing cover.

Baked Raisin Rhubarb Sauce.

1 cup seedless raisins
3 cups prepared rhubarb
3 thin slices orange, rind included
¼ teaspoon mace
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup granulated sugar

Rinse and drain raisins. Place half of the rhubarb in a casserole, add all the raisins and remaining rhubarb. Place orange slices over top and sprinkle with sugar mixed with spices. Cover casserole and bake about 45 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit).

11 Soviet Fliers Make Landing At North Pole

Quartet Will Spend Year on Floe; Four More Planes on Way.

meters through the clouds, seeking a place to land.

"At 11:35 a. m. we landed.

"We are sorry to report that difficulty with the radio apparatus delayed our reports to you.

"We are about 20 kilometers beyond the pole and a little to the west of the Rudolph Island meridian. We are on an ice floe, but it is possible to bring other planes here to establish a polar station.

"Our regards to the government and the (Communist) party."

Four to Remain on Ice Floe.

Included in the landing party were four men who planned to remain there on their drifting ice floe for about one year.

They are Ivan Papanin, who will be chief of the quartet; Ernest Krenkel, radio opeartor; Pyotr Shirsov, described as a hydrobiologist, and Eugene Federov, magnetologist.

Vodopyanoff already held the title "Hero of the Soviet Union" for previous aviation exploits.

Preparatory to the polar flight 17 men spent the long Arctic winter at Rudolph Island, also known as Kronprinz Roudolf Land, where they made the most northerly settlement in the world, studying weather conditions and preparing the take-off field.

The polar landing party is expected to set up a temporary camp and prepare a landing field.

Plan Permanent Base.

The project is to set up a permanent air base and weather station.

The polar flight is part of the Soviet plan to establish a commercial airline between Moscow and San Francisco across the North Pole, a distance of about 6,000 miles, much of it across unexplored sea. The polar station would be the "halfway house."

Final tests complete, the actual move toward the Pole began March 23 from Moscow when order bearing Polar Flier P. G. Golovin took off together with two mechanics and a navigator on an announced flight ato Rudolf via Archangel, Naryan-Mar, Anderma, Cape Desire and Tranquility Bay, on a survey trip.

Immediately after his departure Prof. Schmidt, director of the Northern Sea Route, the greatest commercial and colonization project ever conceived, took off for Archangel to take charge of field operations for the flight.

Together with mechanics and navigators these planes, heavily loaded with supplies of all kinds, have been proceeding by easy stages toward Rudolf, where the wintering party reports the landing field is ready.

American Huts Found.

Vodopyanoff, following his return from Rudolf in April, 1936, reported the finding of huts used by American Arctic explorers in 1902 and 1904 which were still standing. The huts used by the explorer Baldwin, in 1902, still contained a considerable stock of food, but the hut used by the Zeigler expedition two years later was buried in a block of ice.

Soviet scientists claim there is a warm air layer 2 kilometers up which extends through the Arctic zone and which should make high flying more practicable in the Arctic than in Temperate zones.

Prof. Schmidt first became known as an explorer in 1928, when he was a member of the Soviet-German expedition which mapped a large unexplored glacier area in northwest Pamir, an elevated region in west central Asia.

The following year he traveled aboard the icebreaker Sedoff to Franz-Josef Land in the Arctic Ocean and helped build a permanent scientific research station there. In 1930 he returned to this part of the Arctic Circle at the head of another expedition and afterward made a voyage to Novaya Zemlya, discovering a number of islands, one of which was given his name.

Made Arctic Sea Voyage.

In 1932 Prof. Schmidt was appointed chief of another Arctic expedition with instructions from the Soviet government to make a voyage on the icebreaker Sibiriakov from Archangel to the Pacific, through the Northern Sea Route. That voyage was successful.

For his work in this expedition the Soviet government conferred on him the Order of Lenin.

His most dramatic experience previous to this flight was his unsuccessful but heroic expedition across the north of Siberia and through the Bering Strait in 1934, when his icebreaker Cheliuskin, near the end of the hazardous voyage, was gripped in the ice for five months and finally crushed off Kamchatka.

Schmidt supervised the abandonment of the Cheliuskin and maintained order through unbelievable privation until emergency supplies and equipment were rushed to his aid. The rescue of the Cheliuskin party by Soviet aviators, who carried more than 100 persons to safety on Kamchatka, was one of the great sagas of aviation.

Holds High Position.

Prof. Schmidt, born in 1891 in Moguilev on the Dneiper, has held a number of important positions in Soviet economical, educational and scientific life.

His present post is chief of the Department of the Northern Sea Route, and he has in turn been professor of mathematics at the University of Moscow, editor-in-chief of the Great Soviet Encyclopedia, and author of a number of scientific works.

He is a member of the Russian Communist Party, and an authority on Russian literature, history and economic science. He speaks German, French, English, Italian, Lettish and Ukrainian.

Cook's and Peary's expeditions were made by ship and sled.

Negrin Determined on Fight To Finish With Spain's Rebels

New Premier Ignores All Suggestions for Truce.

By Irving B. Pflaum.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Valencia, May 21.—Dr. Juan Negrin, new premier of the loyalist government and Spain's "man of the hour," said tonight that the civil war must be fought to a finish in the blood of battle because foreign arbitration is a failure.

"The only way to end this war is to win it," said the 45-year-old university professor who is working night and day to defeat Gen. Francisco Franco's rebels.

"My government has renewed the unanimous will of the loyalists to strangle the revolt. I do not want anyone to talk of other hypotheses or solutions."

It was evident that this stocky, smooth-shaven Socialist was angry at suggestions for a temporary truce and foreign arbitration to end the 10-month-old struggle.

Defense Right.

"We insist on continuing the war, as every sovereign nation has a right to defend itself against revolt within its own borders," he said.

Dr. Negrin said there was little chance of a Communist regime being established.

I asked whether his Popular Front government proposed to set up democratic socialism.

"The people of the country themselves will be permitted to decide that after the war is over," he answered.

"Abroad they are saying that Spain will become communistic. I repeat that Spain in the future will be what its free, sovereign people decide it shall be."

Loyalists Weakest.

Negrin admitted the loyalists were weaker than the rebels.

Of charges that the loyalists have persecuted the Catholic Church since the outbreak of the war, he said:

"In moments of passion in some regions and cities, excited masses have believed that individuals belonging to the church hierarchy were identified with the rebels. This explains, although it does not justify, lamentable events which the government will prevent from happening again."

The premier was in a happier mood when he sketched the future of the country "after this horrible war."

"The government program is the rational protection of small industries, increased stimulation for technical development and creation of great industries, especially in those fields which are indispensable to the maintenance of independent, economic life."

Negrin said that the rebel forces besieging Bilbao on the Biscay coast were the "largest and best-equipped" of any used thus far in the conflict.

The newspaper referred to a statement by Bishop Stewart Tuesday in which the Episcopal clergyman said, "I have been distressed by the widespread charges leveled at the Catholic clergy by the German government, and I am glad that the charges have finally been challenged."

Bishop Attached.

The Nachtausgabe said, "This man who evidently feels himself obliged to support the Jewish-Communist campaign in the United States against Germany was careful enough to speak solely of his feelings and opinions."

The Hamburg Fremdenblatt also attacked Bishop Stewart.

"The land which produced Martin Luther, the German peasant's son, is the land from which came the light of religious liberty and the manly pride of pure conscience which spread throughout the world and made world history," the newspaper said.

"This land needs no instruction from an American Protestant who shows he is so badly informed on the German situation and forgets the German origin of his own faith."

Support for Mundelein.

Chicago, May 21 (AP).—Repercussions of the international controvery occasioned by George Cardinal Mundelein's criticism of the German government stretched across the Nation today.

Bishop George Craig Stewart, of the Chicago Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, reaffirmed his support of the cardinal.

"I gladly take my stand with Cardinal Mundelein in protesting against any apparent persecution of Roman Catholics," he said. "I am equally opposed to any infringement of religious liberty of evangelical, confessional bodies."

In San Francisco, Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York, whose utterances recently resulted in Nazi diplomatic representations to the State Department, commented:

"Statements such as those made in the German press can only be referred to Commissioner Binger, who has charge of sewage disposal in New York City. No decent person can answer, or even comment, on such filth."

Holy See Agrees.

Vatican City, May 21 (U.P.).—George Cardinal Mundelein's bitter attack in Chicago on the German government "unofficially" expressed the Holy See's opinion of Adolf Hitler's Nazi regime, a person close to the Vatican secretariat said tonight.

The Vatican informant predicted that "further speeches of this nature" could be expected from Roman Catholic bishops throughout the world with "the express idea of impressing upon Germany the necessity of making peace with the church."

"White Book" Planned.

Vatican City, May 21 (AP).—A "white book" attacking the German government's treatment of German Catholics may be published "at any moment" by Pope Pius, Vatican prelates said today.

Rebel Bombers Strafe Women In Bilbao Raid

Sudden Assault Follows Loyalist Air Attack on Offense Lines.

Leon front to the west, a rebel dispatch said. Seven hundred Asturian cavalrymen were killed or wounded, it asserted.

Defenders of refugee-thronged and blasted Bilbao, fighting in their last lines of defense, fought desperately to beat back Gen. Mola's "death blow."

Attack From Five Points.

The rebels attacked the city from five points in their supreme effort to smash the Basques' "El Gallo" lines of triple-defenses.

While the defenders stood against wave after wave of rebels, scores of bombing planes and pursuit ships bombed and machine-gunned their lines.

The line of battle extended from Mount Jata, 15 miles north of the Basque capital, toward the Biscay coast, through Jatica, Munguia and Fica to Mount Bizcargui, only 8 miles from the city's gates.

The rebel headquarters at Salamanca announced that the villages of Fruniz, Amdecoa, Aldain, Meacaou and Mendigane had fallen to Mola's troops. The rebels advanced behind fleets of tanks to assault defense positions with machine gun fire.

Internationals Promised.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, May 21 (AP).—The Madrid-Valencia government has promised to send units of its hard-fighting international brigade to help defend tottering Bilbao, the Basque government announced tonight.

The brigade comprises volunteer Russians, Americans, Englishmen and men from other nations who converged upon Madrid to join the government forces shortly after the civil war began. It has been credited with a major share in the successful defense of Madrid.

Madrid Shelling Resumed.

Madrid, May 21 (AP).—Madrid's comparative calm of many days was broken late today as besieging insurgents fired several dozen shells int othe heart of the city, killing at least four persons and wounding 26.

Loyal Warship Bombed.

Valencia (Saturday), May 22 (U.P.). The government today announced that its only battleship, Jaime Primero, was bombed by rebel planes and several members of the crew were killed or injured.

Flying over the heads of other spectators, the bat traveled about 30 feet before striking Loughrin. He was taken to Emergency Hospital in a private auto, where the injuries were diagnosed as concussion of the brain and a possible skull fracture.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937.

By Bob Burns.

I remember we had a bad drought down home one time. The lumbermen had their logs all cut but there wasn't enough water in the creek to take the logs to the mill. The farmers were gettin' more panicky every day from watchin' their crops gradually dry up. Finally the lumbermen and the farmers got together and they sent away and got a preacher to come there and pray for rain. Right after the preacher prayed it started to rain and pretty soon the whole countryside was flooded and the crops were drowned out.

One of the lumbermen happened to be talkin' to a farmer and he says, "Well, that preacher sure is great. He sure got our logs down to the mill." The farmer says, "Yes, but next time, we oughta git a preacher that knows more about farming."

Names

You've probably heard the question asked: "What's in a name?" For answer, the Social Security Board doubtless would say "Confusion."

Just now, the board is handling the names of more than 27,000,000 workers who have filed for Social Security accounts under the Federal old-age benefits program. That number constitutes a lot of names. And the names constitute some bother, particularly the names of Baer, Snyder, Kelly, Bailey, Burkes, Ahrends, Lehmans, Bolans and Keans.

The reason: There are 36 variations of the name Baer, 29 variations of the name Snyder, 14 variations of the name Kelly, 22 variations of Bailey, 22 variations of Burkes, 16 of Ahrends, 18 of Lehmans, and 11 of Keans.

But the board has worked out a system that beats the confusion of the variations. Through a simple phonetic filing system, the great variations in the spelling of names becomes a device for speeding up the location of an account. The system assembles at one point in the board's huge master file all names that sound alike, though spelled differently.

Two different listings of names are kept by the board. One is arranged by account numbers assigned to the workers and the other is alphabetical. In the event a worker has lost his card and does not remember his account number, his ledger card can still be found by means of the phonetic alphabetical file.

If you've been pondering how the name Baer can be spelled 36 different ways, here is how the board lists them: Baer, Baar, Baare, Baear, Baere, Baiar, Baier, Bair, Baire, Bayre, Bairr, Bare, Baehr, Baehre, Bahar, Baehoar, Bahor, Bayor, Bayer, Bayeur, Bear, Beer, Beere, Beier, Beare, Beair, Beaire, Beir, Beirr, Bere, Beahr, Beaher, Behar Beher, Beyar and Beyer.

Henry E. Clepper, formerly with the Division of Information and Education, United States Forest Service, has become executive secretary of the Society of American Foresters. The society is a national organization of professional foresters and has headquarters in Washington. It has an official publication, The Journal of Forestry, and of this Clepper will be managing editor.

Clepper served the Government as a writer on forestry and conservation subjects. A native of Pennsylvania and a graduate of the Pennsylvania State Forest Academy, he joined the Pennsylvania State Forest Service in 1921 and was employed there until entering the Federal service last October.

He had served successively as senior research forester on the staff of the Pennsylvania Forest Research Institute; as assistant chief of the Bureau of Research and Information, Pennsylvania department of forests and waters, and as forester in charge of the Mont Alto State Forest, Mont Alto, Pa.

The Farm Credit Administration announces the following appointments: Cyril J. Kehres, of Monet, Mo., Finance and Research Division; Richard E. Kaufman, of New York City, Planning Section; Frank H. Letson, of Enid, Okla., revolving fund section; Ilia V. Gorrell, of Oklahoma City; Ellen C. Oaks, of Lexington, Ky.; Lorraine A. Riley, of Philadelphia; Virginia M. Saylor, of Hornell, N. Y., and Katherine Schnepp, of Huntington, N. Y., Stenographic Section; Emma R. Hubbs, of Springfield, Ill., and Nina B. Wilson, of Hancock, Md., Detail Unit; Joseph DiPiatro and Eugene Walsky, of Brooklyn, Mail Room, and Charles Rabinowitz, of Philadelphia, General Files Section.

An excursion to housing developments in Washington and Greenbelt will be conducted at 2 o'clock this afternoon under sponsorship of the Social Security Board Union. The bus will leave from the Social Security Building, 1712 G street northwest.

General Accounting Office employes and their friends will dance this evening at the Wardman Park Hotel. The event is sponsored by A. F. G. E. Lodge, No. 8.

Ninth Street Survey Gets D.C. Approval

Business Men Urging Cleanup and 'New Deal.'

Playground Extensions Sought by City Planners.

Washington's picturesque Ninth street is going to be officially studied by the august National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The investigation, the aim of which will be to improve the well-known downtown thoroughfare between Pennsylvania avenue and L street, is being undertaken at the request of W. A. Roberts, counsel for Ninth Street Associated, it was announced.

Last January, it was learned yesterday, the former people's counsel wrote Chairman Frederic A. Delano requesting the commission to make such a survey. Using the term, "city rot," he cited the street's run-down condition and pointed out that it used to be an important section of good appearance.

Ninth Street Associated, Roberts explained, consists of business men and property owners between Pennsylvania avenue and L street who are seeking a "new deal" for their area.

Planner Called In.

The result of Roberts' plea was that the planning commission, concluding its monthly meeting yesterday, authorized the desired survey and arranged for it to be conducted by Harland Bartholomew, St. Louis city planning expert. Bartholomew has made many similar studies in large cities, including one in the lower east side of New York City.

Taking up recreational problems, the commission directed a study to be made of possible play uses of the Fourteenth and Upshur streets site now occupied by the Tuberculosis Hospital, and approved condemnation of an undeveloped tract at Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest for a playground.

Firmly convinced that the grounds of the hospital, scheduled to be moved to Glenn Dale, Md., by July 1, should be converted into a recreation center, the planners authorized Lewis R. Barrett, coordinator of the District Recreation Committee, to determine what the site could accommodate in the nature of tennis courts, ball diamonds and swimming pools.

Disposition of the city-owned site, however, has not yet been decided. It is being sought for new school buildings and other District projects, as well as for playground use.

Playground Needed.

According to Secretary Thomas S. Settle, the commission is anxious to obtain title to the Lamont street property because that particular section of the city sorely needs a playground. It comprises about one acre, he said.

Acknowledging efforts being made in the Senate to name the four Mall drives for Ohio, Maine, Oklahoma and Missouri, the commission reiterated its support of their present designations—Washington, Adams, Jefferson and Madison.

Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, will be informed of this stand, Settle said, with the suggestion that the Capital still has a number of attractive streets and avenues which might be renamed in honor of the four States.

In a report on housing construction in the District, John Nolen, jr., director of planning, told the commission that grave dangers exist in building a surplus of four-family apartment houses, sometimes called duplexes, and large "villages" with a dense population.

He exhibited figures showing that a certain apartment project of the community or village type which is now being planned will contain more suites than the total of duplex dwelling units for which permits were granted during the first quarter of 1937.

House Surplus Feared.

With government workers showing no increase in number, continued increases in construction—especially apartments and flats—may bring about an unhealthy housing surplus leading to a serious vacancy problem and consequent tax delinquency, Nolen said.

Before adjourning the two-day session the commission also:

Voted that whatever site is selected for Naval Hospital, scheduled to be moved from its present Twenty-third street home, meet with the commission's approval.

Approved models, submitted by Municipal Architect Nathan C. Wyeth, showing how buildings would be located in the proposed Municipal Center development bounded by Third street, John Marshall place and Pennsylvania and Indiana avenues.

Approved the setback line and approaches for the National Gallery of Art to be built south of the Mall by Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury.

Authorized Chairman Delano to appoint a committee to work with the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, whose decision to build a monument to the third President at the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park has been criticized throughout the country.

Capital Schools Seek Additions And Play Space

Board to Act on Requests Later; Americanization Unit Asks Funds.

A large number of requests, many of them for play space, were made before the Board of Education last night by representatives from Washington civic and parent-teacher organizations. The requests will be taken under consideration, and, if found worthy, included in the estimates for the 1939 budget.

Alexander Bell, speaking for the Americanization School Association, in submitting his request for an increased appropriation to carry further the work of the Webster School, declared that "in these days of unrest both here and abroad that school is doing a particularly praiseworthy mission. It is, however, undermanned. The staff, because of the decrease in the appropriation, has been cut in half; the number of pupils has increased; teachers are being forced to work too long overtime."

A suggested budget for nursery schools, which would permit the use of funds for instruction of children under 5 years of age, was presented to the board at the close of the session by Mrs. Florence W. Olsen, chairman of the Advisory Council on Nursery Schools. The plan would provide two nursery schools for each geographical section of the city and would, said Mrs. Olsen, "reduce delinquency and frustration, and better prepare children for elementary school."

Among the schools submitting requests were Gordon Junior High School, Powell Junior High School, play space; Macfarland Junior High School, auditorium; Bancroft School, Roosevelt High School, seven-room wing; Whittier Elementary School, auditorium; Norwood School, Barnard School, Petworth School, play space; Thaddeus Stevens School, Taft School, ten-room wing; Woodridge School, play space; Crosby Noyes School, Bunker Hill School, Cardozo School, Terrell Junior High School, Wormley Junior High School, play space and auditorium; Logan School, play space and auditorium; Armstrong School, Hilton Peabody, play space; Elliot Junior High School, Webster School, increase to $13,000 of the appropriation to carry on the Americanization work; Kingsman and Pierce schools; Anacostia Junior and Senior High schools, seven-room wing; Randall Junior High School, Deanwood School, Henry Smuthers School, and Thompson School, play space.

Congressmen and Others Gather to Discuss Meeting of 30,000 Youths From All States Here June 30 to July 8.

Boy Scouts who made good—men who rose from uniforms to togas of state—met around the breakfast table in the United States Senate Restaurant yesterday morning.

They were brought together to talk about the coming Boy Scout Jamboree which will bring about 30,000 Scouts to Washington next month. But as most of the statesmen, including Senators, Representatives and a Cabinet official, once had been Scouts themselves, a spirit of old-time comeradere dominated nearly 60 dignitaries. Nearly 60 dignitaries were on hand.

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, an honorary vice president of the Boy Scouts of America, was the master of ceremonies. But as far as most of the guests were concerned the real host was Representative Sol Bloom, of George Washington Bicentennial fame, whose task now is to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

Representative Bloom Speaks.

One of Senator McAdoo's duties was to introduce Representative Bloom, and this function he performed as follows:

"As every organization must have its flower," said the Senator, "so the Constitution has its Bloom."

While Bloom, in his Scout uniform and language, made it clear he is a Scout at heart, it also was apparent that he still was thinking of the Constitution. There is a definite tie-up between the Scout jamboree here June 30 to July 9, and this year's sesquicentennial observance. Thousands of boys from every State are coming to the Capital to make "A Pilgrimage to the Shrine of the Constitution"—that's the official slogan of the Scout jamboree.

Other speakers were Speaker William H. Bankhead and Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper. Both paid tribute to the large Boy Scout organization. In response, James E. West, national Boy Scout executive, assured the statesmen the Boy Scouts, once here, will do just what they were expected to do—view the Government at first hand, and pay tribute to the Constitution.

West, Bloom Pose.

Later Chief West and Representative Bloom went across the Potomac to Jamboree headquarters, just across the highway from the Municipal Airport, and began rehearsals for a newsreel act.

Chief West met members of the President's committee at a luncheon in the Jamboree mess tent. Commissioner George E. Allen, chairman of the committee, conducted the meeting in which plans for the Jamboree program were advanced, and progress of arrangements to date reported. Harvey A. Gordon, director of engineering for the Boy Scouts of America, who is supervising the construction of the tents along the west bank of the Potomac River, said accommodations now are being made for 28,190 boys. This number, he warned, may increase during the 40 days between now and opening of the Jamboree.

Chief West told the committee that already more Scouts have indicated they expect to be here than were planning to come at the time the 1935 Jamboree was canceled.

Real Estate Tax Loophole Is Promised

Supply Bill to Permit Rise if Necessary, Thomas Pledges.

Will Avoid 'Tying Hands' of D. C. in Case Levies Fail.

By James D. Secrest.

The District supply bill when reported to the Senate will carry no prohibition against an increase in the local realty tax, Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on appropriations, stated yesterday.

"I'm not going to tie the hands of the Commissioners like that," he said, "so that if the tax bills fail to pass they would have to incur a deficit."

This ban was attached to the District bill when it was reported to the House but was stricken out on a point of order raised by members of the House District Committee.

While members of the Thomas sub-committee stated they are opposed to any hike in the realty tax, Chairman Kennedy, of the House sub-committee on taxation, predicted that a definite tax program will be reported to the House District Committee before the end of next week.

He said that he would then ask for a special rule to facilitate the passage of the measures by the House. The tax bills should reach the Senate, he said, before the middle of June.

Time Is Short.

Even under this plan the Senate District Committee will have only two weeks to study the bills and push them through the Senate before the end of the fiscal year. If the committee rejects any of the bills or substitutes new tax proposals, conferences and further House action will be necessary.

Although District officials yesterday scoffed at the threat that the District realty rate might be raised to $2, they are genuinely alarmed lest they be confronted with a delicate fiscal situation on July 1.

As the realty rate is annually fixed for the new fiscal year on July 1, the Commissioners are afraid that the tax bills may be so tardy that they will have no assurance at that time that they are to be enacted into law.

Advances Hoped.

To meet a $6,000,000 deficit, the realty tax rate would have to be boosted to $2.10; for a probable deficit of $7,500,000, the rate would have to be hiked to $2.25.

District officials hope, however, that they will obtain authority before July 1 to obtain funds from the Federal Treasury in the form of advances in anticipation of taxes to be collected.

Such authority, if voted by Congress, will alleviate the necessity of running up the realty tax rate until revenue from other sources is forthcoming.

Senators Capper, of Kansas, and Austin, of Vermont, Republican members of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, registered their opposition to a realty tax rise as Kennedy prepared to make a report on all new tax proposals to his sub-committee on Tuesday.

Hearings Rushed.

District budget hearings were being rushed toward conclusion as the first week's inquiry ended. Senator Thomas predicted that they will be concluded next week.

Only one more day will be necessary, he said, to hear District department heads. Civic and trade organization spokesmen will start their parade on Tuesday and probably continue for several days.

While the sub-committee has heard testimony on both sides of the proposal of the House sub-committee that Gallinger Hospital and the District tuberculosis sanatoria be transferred from the Welfare to the Health Department, it is understood no decision has been reached.

The move will be considered further, it is expected, when nonofficial witnesses are heard next week.

N.Y. Firm Asks Abattoir Zone Be Residential

Hot Controversy Expected When Plea Is Heard About June 3.

In a move to improve an area only 300 yards from the site of the proposed Benning abattoir, the National Insured Homes Corporation, of New York, has asked the Zoning Commission to change the section, now both residential and industrial, to an entirely residential zone.

The request, expected to arouse even more controversy over the now hotly debated abattoir question, is scheduled to come before the next hearing of the commission, which begins June 2. It will not come up until at least the second day of the hearing, however, since the body has announced that not more than the first 27 of the 47 rezoning requests will be considered the first day. The National Insured Homes Corporation proposal is thirty-third on the list.

Plans Home Development.

It is understood the New York company bought the land May 12 and intends to start a residential development there. The tract comprises 65 acres within the area bounded by Anacostia Park, Benning road, Kenilworth avehue proposed and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks.

Although attorneys for the abattoir said they "had not heard" of the case, it was believed the slaughterhouse company would oppose the measure at the hearing. Only recently it was granted a permit to rebuild the establishment, gutted by fire several years ago.

Permission to erect a 110-foot-high building in the 1800 block of I street northwest was asked by Doctors Hospital, Inc. Present regulations specify that buildings in that section shall be not more than 90 feet tall.

Michigan Park Plea.

Another request asked for a zoning change in the Michigan Park area which would ban erection of apartment buildings or row houses.

The commission will also consider a petition to allow shops to be set up in an apartment house under construction on Idaho avenue northwest, between Massachusetts and Cathedral avenues.

One proposal asks that the site of the old P street carbarn, in the area bounded by Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, Twenty-sixth street and P and Q streets northwest, be changed to a residential zone.

Man Dies of Burns After House Blaze

Burns received when he was trapped in his home which caught fire May 17 proved fatal yesterday to C. G. Hathaway, 40, who died in Gallinger Hospital.

Hathaway suffered severe burns when he was trapped in the front hall of 1231 North Capitol street, early last Monday. He was removed from the scene and treated at Sibley Hospital and later removed to Gallinger.

La Roe Cites Needs In Talk on Lorton

The "mixing of first offenders with hardened criminals at Lorton Reformatory" is the most serious impediment to successful parole administration in the District, Wilbur La Roe, jr., parole board member, told the Men's Club of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church last night.

He discussed the parole system in Washington, pointing out that the parole board pays special attention to younger prisoners, of whom there are about 400 at Lorton. "Some of these prisoners are mere boys" * * * he said. "To give these fellows a new start in life is constructive work. But the experienced burglars and gangsters and stickup men had better remain behind bars."

La Roe pointed out that the Parole Board since last July has considered 546 new cases, in 224 of which paroles have been granted. He added that in many States, due to overcrowded prisons, parole boards are serving "as a substitute for adequate prison facilities."

Police, Traffic Heads Check Danger Spots

Safety Devices Will Be Installed in Hope of Cutting Death Toll.

Accident Decrease Is Shown at Inspected Intersections.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

In a combined effort to check Washington's rising traffic death toll, police and traffic department officials joined yesterday to conduct a survey of "danger spots" throughout the city with plans to install adequate protective measures.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, has ordered members of his command to report all hazardous traffic points in the various precincts.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer is conducting studies of dangerous intersections where five or more accidents have occurred, and at numerous points has erected "stop" signs and signal lights.

Both Maj. Brown and Van Duzer recently assailed the "blind" crossing of Harewood road and Michigan avenue northeast, where an elderly woman was killed in a crash several days ago.

Fourteenth and Pennsylvania.

Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest remains the city's most dangerous corner—in number of accidents—Van Duzer declared. Since the first of the year nearly a score of persons have been injured and 19 accidents have been reported at this intersection.

Study of the problem, according to traffic records, revealed most of the accidents occurred between midnight and 7 a. m. To correct this, Van Duzer ordered signal lights to remain burning all night.

It also developed, said Van Duzer, that left turns at this spot resulted in collisions. And to remedy this condition, all left turns were prohibited. Since corrective measures have been taken at this corner, he added, no serious accidents have been reported.

When a danger spot is called to the attention of Van Duzer's department, a study is made of accident causes and each crash is analyzed. Safety measures then are adopted either by recommendations for greater enforcement or by installing signal devices.

Logan Circle Hazardous.

Of the city's circles, said Van Duzer, Logan Circle is considered the "most dangerous." Since January 1, 23 accidents have been reported at this spot—all on the north side of the circle.

Traffic entering the circle at the same time from Vermont and Rhode Island avenues, investigation showed, was responsible for the large number of accidents. Van Duzer ordered the flow of vehicles from these streets separated, and a marked decrease in mishaps was noted.

With 48 highway fatalities thus far this year—14 more than in the same period in 1936—officials fear the present accident rate will send Washington's death record to an all-time high within a few months.

Fugitive Burglar Suspect Retaken

A man who escaped from a policeman who had arrested him and his companion as suspects in a burglary was recaptured yesterday a few minutes after he fled from Policeman H. K. Dressendorfer.

Dressendorfer surprised the pair leaving a store in the 4800 block of Conduit road about 1 a. m. While waiting for the patrol wagon one of the captives started to run, Dressendorfer said. The officer fired at the fleeing man. Other officers, attracted by the shot, recaptured the suspect.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The glory that was Tech's in inter-high track and field was snatched by a Central team yesterday which ran off with the fortieth annual high school meet with surprising ease. Rolling up 74 points to 54½ for the defending champions, athletes of the Dark Blue cavorted in winning form all over Central Stadium.

Eight of the 14 new inter-high champions bore Central colors as Coach Hardy Pearce's boys took over the title relinquished by Central in 1932 and held since then by Tech. Eastern finished third, with 37 points; Roosevelt, fourth, with 32½, and Western, last, with 11 points.

Central had ruled a slight choice to win, but the decisive manner in which it polished off all opposition was a distinct surprise. The Mount Pleasanters' victory in the mile relay, concluding event of the day, was not the least of these and was typical of the well-rounded strength the host team demonstrated from start to finish.

To shock-haired, swarthy Louis Chacos went the bulk of the honors garnered by the new titleholders. The speedy football halfback not only won the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes, but anchored the relay quartet with a burst of speed over the quarter-mile route, which beat out the favored Roosevelt four by a comfortable margin.

Chacos also was third in the discus throw, bringing his individual total to 13 points, exclusive of the relay.

Stocky, deceptive looking Wilbur Barr, a chunky youngster who looks anything but a hurdler, took two more first places for the Pearce performers, sailing to first place in the 220-yard low hurdles and throwing the javelin with a gold medal toss of 159 feet 6¾ inches.

No records were broken as the five schools gathered for the traditional carnival, but the expected struggle for Tech's title furnished enough interest to keep the stands yelling continuously.

Chacos opened the second day of the meet with an eyelash win over Lester Thomas, of Tech, and Lou Napoli, of Roosevelt, in the 100. It was the closest finish of the day. Lster he came out to lead Napoli to the wire in the furlong by at least 5 feet.

In the second race of the day, Central sprang a big surprise when Emanuel Servator outclassed the field in the 440 to win by three steps from Bob Kollmyer, of Roosevelt. Jim Farquharson, of Western, was third with Cleveland Stauffer and Wilbert Lewis, of Roosevelt, taking the other places.

Because of its quarter-mile strength, Roosevelt was the choice to take the relay and had the lead at the start of the last lap. Servator had given Central a 3-yard advantage in the first lap with Wiley Blackwell a close second for Eastern and Stauffer, third.

In the second lap, Ed Donnelly opened up a lead for Eastern with Lewis cutting in to second place for Roosevelt. Central was third as Paul Livingstone banded the baton to Dan Hoadley for the third lap. The student onlookers cut loose in a bedlam as Charlie Hughes, of Eastern; Lawrence Richardson, of Roosevelt, and Livingstone battled around the oval to pass the stick to their anchormen virtually in a dead heat.

Kollmyer sprinted to an early lead, but Chacos passed him in the backstretch as Englehardt, of Eastern, faded. The Central boy fought off Kollmyer's stretch drive and won by at least three steps. Eastern was disqualified for Hughes' stepping out of his lane on the third lap into Richardson's path.

Hal (Buck) Kiessling gave Eastern a first place in a 120-yard high hurdles upset, beating out Willis Smith and Burall Hildebrand, of Tech, and Joe Kahn, of Central, the favorite.

Englehardt raced to another upset for the Lincoln Parkers in the half mile, winning by a scant step as Irving Ornstein, of Central, pounded to the wire with a belated drive.

Young Truman Lancaster, of Roosevelt, took the mile run with plenty to spare, about 5 yards, overtaking the favorite, Charlie Luckett, of Tech, on the third lap and running away to finish in 4 minutes 42 seconds as Bernie Jackson, of Central, raced past the tiring Techman to take second place.

Jake Fleischman, massive tackle on Tech's grid team, made off with the discus throw as Chacos finished third after setting the pace in the first day's qualifying round. Fleischman also placed second in the shotput, won by Abe Cohen, of Eastern.

Gallaudet Downs Eagle Trackmen

Capturing ten victories and scoring heavily in place and show positions, Gallaudet's trackmen romped off with a 78-49 victory over American University in their annual meet yesterday at Kendall Green.

Frank Davis, consistent sophomore performer; Elmer Cabb, all-around ace; Joe Burnett, one of the town's best distance runners, led their mates to victory, accounting for more than half of Gallaudet's wins. Coach Teddy Hughes' men were never pressed for points, although competition was keen.

Sid Sitnik, of American, surprised himself and the fans by winning the broad jump with one leap, a 19-feet-1-inch effort, that defied the best efforts of his opponents.

Macks Win, 4-3, on Moses' Circuit Blow

Rookie Caster Hurls 4-Hit Ball for Third Win Over White Sox.

Philadelphia, May 21 (AP).—Wally Moses' homer in the sixth with Bill Werber on base, coupled with George Caster's four-hit pitching, gave the Athletics their third straight victory over the Chicago White Sox today, 4 to 3.

Caster, a 28-year-old rookie from Portland, was in great form in chalking up his fourth victory of the season. He pitched hitless ball until singles by Radcliff, Walker and Bonura, plus a force out gave the Sox two runs in the fourth. Radcliff got the fourth hit, a single, in the eighth. In addition, Caster led a 10-hit attack on Monty Stratton with three hits in four times up.

The Sox scored their last run in the ninth when Cissell dropped Hayes' pop fly and Luke Appling scored all the way from first. Umpire Lou Knolls banished Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Sox in the ninth after protesting a called third strike on Zeke Bonura.

Estelle Page, Dorothy Kirby Meet Today in Golf Final

Atlanta, May 21.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, the "siege gun" from North Carolina, and Miss Dorothy Kirby, youthful Georgian sharpshooter, will meet tomorrow for the championship of Southern women's golf.

Mrs. Page, medalist at Canoe Brook in the Women's National tournament a year ago, overwhelmed Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, Tex., a former champion, 7 and 6, and established a scoring record.

While extended somewhat, 17-year-old Miss Kirby, three times Georgia champion, rallied down the home stretch to beat Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex., the qualifying medalist, 3 and 2.

Cracking par by five strokes over her 12-hole journey, Mrs. Pake was favored to win her first Southern crown.

The North Carolinian, who, like Miss Kirby, has been playing golf for six years but never has taken a lesson, clipped four strokes off the card with an outgoing 33 to lead Mrs. Goldthwaite 4 up, and won the next three holes to close out the skirmish.

She collected four birdies and an eagle.

Miss Kirby, winner of the Georgia championship when only 11 years old, is Georgia's first hope for the crown since Miss Margaret Maddox won in 1929. A North Carolinian has never annexed the title.

Cubs Advance Into Third by Beating Giants

Six-Run Splurge in Third Knocks Hal Schumacher From Box.

Chicago, May 21.—The Cubs marched into third place in the National League today and dropped the New York Giants to fourth by clubbing the loop champions, 8 to 5, in the opener of their current series.

A six-run splurge in the third inning, in which they banged Hal Schumacher out of the box and collected seven hits off him and his successor, Cliff Melton, sewed up the game for the Cubs. Highlighting the spree was a two-run triple by Billy Jurges.

Pirates Bow To Boston in Opener, 6-3

Bowman Loses 1st Game to McFayden; Berger's Bat Helps.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 21.—The Boston Bees stopped the Pirates and Joe Bowman's winning streak today by taking the first game of the series, 6 to 3.

Danny MacFayden pitched an airtight game and had no trouble holding the home club in check after the second inning with the aid of some fast play by Tony Cuccinello and Rabbit Warstler. Both infielders came to his rescue with startling plays to choke off threatening rallies.

Whitehill Triumphs Over Former Mates

Veteran Southpaw Checks Nats Until Batted Out in Eighth; Three Triples, Four 2-Baggers Among Tribe's 11 Hits.

By Shirley Povich.

Washington's four-game winning streak gave a couple of convulsive gasps and expired yesterday—the victims of blunt instruments in the hands of persons identified positively as the Cleveland Indians.

The Indians were swinging with greater gusto than their total of 11 hits implies. Three of those hits were three-baggers and four of 'em were two-baggers. Thus it was that they bagged the game, 7 to 5.

It was a pretty galling affair for the Nats, because Earl Whitehill, who wasn't deemed worthy of the Washington club's hire this season, came back to Griffith Stadium with his new Cleveland playmates and threw a well-pitched game into the faces of the Nats.

The old left-hander didn't go the full distance—he was wavering rather obviously in the eighth inning—but save for a three-run flurry by the Nats in the fourth, he had them kind of helpless.

Washington's Mr. James DeShong was off to a sour start in his search for his fifth straight pitching victory. The Indians wrung a pair of runs from him in the opening inning and they were hitting with authority all afternoon. DeShong's presence was deemed no longer vital to the Nats in the midst of a seventh-inning uprising by the Indians, and Syd Cohen finished the game.

The ladies' day gathering had a chance to whoop it up in the ninth, though, when the Nats got a pair of men on base and the heavy end of the batting order due at the plate.

The Nats went into that ninth trailing, 7 to 4, and there was great to do in the stands when Walter Millies bashed one of John Heving's pitches for a single to right field. But Pinch Hitter Cecil Travis hit into a force play, and, despite the cheers of the ladies, that was no good.

A rally appeared to be on in full cry, though, when Freddie Sington, subbing for Ben Chapman, who quit the game an inning before with a bruised hip, whaled a two-bagger against the center-field concrete to put Travis on third.

Lewis Grounded Out.

But there was a terrific let-down after that. Buddy Lewis, who had authored a tremendous home run over the rightfield fence earlier in the game, grounded out meekly to Roy Hughes, and Joe Kuhel did the same thing. The Nats had one more run and the Indians had the ball game.

The Indians went out and got a couple of runs very simply against DeShong in the first inning. Heath simply banged a three-bagger into rightfield, Averill simply whacked one to left, Solters simply sent a long fly to Stone and the Indians had a 2-0 lead.

They had a 4-0 lead after the fourth, but DeShong was rather blameless that time. Buddy Myer let Trosky's grounder get away from him, or DeShong would have retired the side scoreless. As it was, Pytlak doubled over Chapman's head and Hughes followed with a single to center.

Millies Drives in Two.

Washington got in the ball game in the fourth. Buddy Lewis sounded the tocsin, or something, when he whaled one of Whitehills' pitches far, far over the rightfield wall. Johnny Stone and Buddy Myer followed with singles, and after Bluege walked, Walter Millies scored 'em both with a single off Hughes' glove.

But they were pretty meek with Whitehill after that and the Indians boosted their lead to 6-3 in the seventh when Hughes doubled. Lary singled and young Jeff Heath cleaned the bases with a three-bagger. Syd Cohen finally got the side out.

Washington picked up a run in the eighth when Myer's double to center knocked Whitehill out of the box, but it was all pretty useless.

Johnson Defeats Hollenbaugh on 21st Green at Manor Club

This Morning
WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

The Cleveland Indians seem to be doing very well in spite of the boys in the club's front office who have been batting .000 for the past couple of seasons. There the Indians are, right on top of the league, and moving along nicely.

But that apparently is not the fault of Mr. C. C. Slapnicka, who goes by the title of "assistant to the president" of the team. Mr. Alva Bradley. Mr. Slapnicka, who moved into the front office when Billy Evans moved out as general manager of the Indians, has been setting a batch of all-time bungling records.

POVICH.

It was his handling of L'Affaire Feller that almost cost the Indians' title to the young strikeout sensation. The Indians owned him, sure enough, but Slapnicka's eagerness to bring him up to the big leagues cost the Indians a few harrowing months while Judge Landis was deciding the case, and also cost them $7,500.

* * * *

You remember how Slapnicka talled Feller direct to Cleveland after signing him to a New Orleans contract? Well, you can't do that in the big leagues. Cleveland violated a rule that Slapnicka should have known about and, as a consequence, the Indians had to fork over $7,500 to the Des Moines club, which entered some kind of a claim to Feller.

* * * *

The Indians actually did lose out on Outfielder Tom Henrich by the bunglesome tactics of the Cleveland front office which Slapnicka directs. Henrich was starring at Milwaukee for three years but the Indians didn't exercise their option on him. Rather, Slapnicka called in Outfielder Jeff Heath, of the Zanesville Club, who had spent one year in the minors.

* * * *

Well, the upshot of that was that Henrich squawked to Landis that the Cleveland Club was keeping him in the minors and restraining his natural progress in his profession. And Landis promptly declared Henrich a free agent. The Cleveland Club, which needs outfielders no less than Hauptmann needed an alibi, thus lost an outfielder for whom the Yankees were willing to pay a $30,000 bonus for signing.

* * * *

And only a month or so ago Slapnicka succeeded in depriving the Cleveland Club of a vast amount of publicity that would have had to do with young Bob Feller.

* * * *

When the Nation's most popular picture magazine sent one of its ace men to Cleveland for a series of pictures of Feller, Slapnicka shooed him off the field. It seems that Slapnicka had been instrumental in selling the exclusive picture rights to the young strike-out king to a rival magazine firm and didn't want to jeopardize that contract.

* * * *

Anyway, a gob of publicity that would have done the Cleveland Club untold good at the gate around the league was lost to the Indians.

* * * *

He's been having his trouble with the Cleveland newspapermen, too, I am informed. In fact, one of the Cleveland baseball writers who is supposed to be accompanying the club actually is not accompanying the club on account of Mr. Slapnicka.

* * * *

I refer to my friend, Stu Bell, of the Cleveland Press, who is with the Indians on their present Eastern trip, but who, as I was saying, is not accompanying them.

* * * *

Bell, it seems, fell afoul of Mr. Slapnicka's affections on account of something he had the temerity to write about the Cleveland club a couple of years ago, and is in virtual coventry with the team.

* * * *

Mr. Slapnicka has issued orders to the traveling secretary of the Indians that no railroad tickets may be purchased for Bell, and that no hotel reservations are to be made for Mr. Bell and that, in fact, Mr. Bell is not to be permitted to ride in the same railroad car with the Cleveland players.

* * * *

So, as a result, Mr. Bell goes traipsing around the country behind the Indians, enjoying none of the courtesies extended to the other writers with the team. And, as another result, Mr. Bell is often tempted to write unflattering pieces about the Indians and Mr. Slapnicka and undoubtedly does.

* * * *

Landon Downs Friends School on Diamond

Landon Prep, beaten in every other game of the season, made it a fairly successful year yesterday by winning its annual game with Friends School, traditional rival, 14 to 9, on the Friends Field. Huck Hughes, Landon shortstop, hit two home runs to pace Landon's 13-hit offensive.

Missed Putts Almost Fatal In Hard Golf

Approach Shot, 4-Foot Putt on 19th Green Save Winner.

By Merrill W. Whittlesey.

The subpar golf that had carried Russ Hollebaugh, the Kenwood linksman, to the final round of the Manor Club invitation tournament, deserted him at a crucial spot yesterday and Everett (Edgie) Johnson, the fair-haired Beaver Dam golfer, won the fifth renewal of the tournament and the J. Webster Manning trophy over the marathon 21-hole route.

The final match was dotted with every available brand of golf and it was the comeback spirit of the underdog Johnson that carried him to victory.

The eventual winner missed four putts shorter than the length of his putter in the first 15 holes, but managed to stay even as the rotund Russ was not playing the golf that marked his earlier victories over Bobby Brownell and Claude Rippy.

The difference was never more than one hole on the first nine, first Johnson and then Hollebaugh leading. A beautiful approach shot on the par 5 ninth hole earned Johnson a halve and he turned 1 up.

They halved the tenth in pars and on the eleventh Edgie blew a 2-footer for a halve and Hollebaugh squared the match. Again on the thirteenth he missed a short one and after halving the next he blew his third short putt in four holes, and a chance to square the issue. He caught his opponent, eventually, on the sixteenth.

Both were trapped on the eighteenth, and they finished the regulation match all even, halving the hole in 1 over par fives. It looked like the finish on the nineteenth as Johnson half topped his drive and was short with his next, while Hollebaugh was on in 2, but Johnson played a great approach shot and canned a 4-footer for a halve.

The gallery started walking toward the clubhouse on the short par 3 second, the twentieth hole, as Edgie trapped his tee shot and barely reached the green in 2 was away, putted first and left Russ with 2 putts for a win. He putted safely but a cruel break robbed him of his 3 when his 1½-foot putt lipped the cup and the match went 21 holes.

Hollebaugh played the next in indifferent fashion, skying his drive, short in 2, chipped short and missed the putt while Johnson played the hole in regulation fashion for the match.

Women's City Net Tourney Opens Today

Mrs. Robinson Defends City of Washington Title.

A fast field of 32 starts play at 1 p. m. today on the Rock Creek courts in the opening round of the annual City of Washington women's tennis championship. All but one of the city's first 10 ranking players will compete for the title won last year by Mrs. Stanley R. Robinson, seeded No. 1.

A torrid struggle is definitely in store on the basis of the entry list, which has Mary Cootews, hard-swinging Alexandria girl, and Edith Clarke seeded second and third, respectively. A new threat has appeared to snatch the fourth-seeded post—Mary Greason, of George Washington University.

A product of Honolulu, Miss Greason has already established herself as a player of high-ranking caliber. She was given the No. 4 berth in preference to Sara Moore, plucky fourth-ranking player of the District. The four top-seeded players and Miss Moore all played on the Middle Atlantic's Sears Cup team.

Pittsburgh Net Team Defeats Colonials, 7-2

Take Four Singles and Two Doubles; Brasted Is Lone G. W. Winner.

George Washington's racquet representatives drew the curtain on their 1937 campaign yesterday at Columbia Country Club, bowing out ingloriously under the cloud of a 7-to-2 defeat administered by Pittsburgh's potent Panthers. Despite their loss, the Colonials got an even break for the season, winning four of eight matches.

George Washington expected trouble, especially from Don Madden, No. 1 man and a high-ranking collegiate star, but not the vanload of woe Pitt heaped on its figurative lap. The Colonials not only lost four of five singles matches and two of three doubles, but were closer to being shutout than the score indicates. Pitt loafed through the majority of matches.

George Brasted, occupying the No. 3 position in the line-up, chalked up George Washington's lone singles victory, disposing of Mogan by the convincing figures of 6—1, 6—4. In doubles it was Surine and Mintz who scored, winning over Hartman and Solow in three sets, 4—6, 6—0, 6—3.

Singles—Madden (P.) defeated Surine, 6—0, 6—3; Bald (P.) defeated Stolar, 6—0, 6—3; Brasted (G. W.) defeated Mogan, 6—1, 6—4; Solow (P.) defeated Faris, 6—0, 6—3; Hartman (P.) defeated Robins, 6—4, 6—2; Blatt (P.) defeated Mumaw, 6—2, 6—1.

Doubles—Madden and Bald (P.) defeated Brasted and Faris, 6—4, 6—3; Mogan and Solow (P.) defeated Ceppos and Stolar, 6—4, 6—3; Surine and Mintz (G. W.) defeated Hartman and Solow, 4—6, 6—0, 6—3.

Fischer to Face Indians Today

Carl Fisher, who was fired off the Cleveland pitching staff by Manager Steve O'Neill two weeks ago, will pitch against the Indians today.

The lefthanded Fisher will be getting his second starting assignment since joining the Nats. He failed to last the route in his first attempt.

Hoyas Whip Tigers for Golf Crown

Meet Yale for Eastern Laurels; 6-3 Victory Avenges Defeat.

Woodway Country Club, Springdale, Conn., May 21.—Avenging an earlier defeat, Georgetown's golf team defeated Princeton, 6-3, to win the Southern half of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf League. By virture of today's victory, the Hoyas are scheduled to meet Yale in a playoff to determine the championship of the conference.

Georgetown won from the Tigers today by sweeping all six points in the first two foursomes. The first four Hoya golfers, Billy Dettweiler, Harvey Johnson, Charlie Pettijohn and Maurie Nee were all 78 or better. Dettweiler was low for the day with a 75. The Princeton team won all their points in the third foursome.

Dettweiler, after being even at the end of the first four holes, forged ahead at the fifth and rounded the turn 2 up. He gradually increased his lead and finally closed out the match on the sixteenth hole. Johnson won the ninth hole to be 1 up at the turn and then proceeded to win both the twelfth and thirteenth holes to increase his margin to 3 up. Johnson ended the match on the seventeenth hole by taking a 5 to a6 by Konoye.

Pettijohn, putting well, took an early lead and never lost it. He rounded the turn 3 up and closed out the match on the sixteenth hole with a birdie 3. Nee, after being down to Parker in the first nine, came back strong and finally won on the seventeenth hole.

Tomorrow's match with Yale will be over the 36-hole route at 9 in the morning. The individual matches will be played and in the afternoon at 2 the foursome matches will be staged.

Dettweiler (Georgetown) defeated Marks (Princeton), 3 and 2; Johnson (Georgetown) defeated Konove (Princeton), 2 and 1. Best ball—Georgetown, 5 and 4.

Scribes, Senators Frolic at Quantico

The Marines will be landed upon and probably won't have everything under control at Quantico today when more than 1,000 Senators, Congressmen and newspapermen descend on headquarters on the annual Anchors Aweigh tour of the National Press Club.

Once in Quantico the invaders will not be content with just reviewing Marines and things like that, but they will indulge in what has laughingly been advertised as a baseball game between the members of Congress and the Press Gallery gods.

Because Quantico does not operate on daylight saving time, the game has been limited to one and one-half hours, which may mean no more than one inning and not more than a dozen or so cases of exhaustion.

President Roosevelt will motor from Washington to be on hand to throw out the first ball in the baseball game. After dinner in the mess hall there will be four boxing bouts and a battle royal. Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the boxing commission, will fly to Quantico to referee the bouts.

Hubbell Boasts Edge Over Dean In Long, Colorful Mound Rivalry

New York, May 20 (AP).—The score now stands 5 to 3 in favor of Carl Hubbell over Dizzy Dean in the most colorful major league pitching rivalry since the celebrated duels between Christy Mathewson and Mordecai (Three-Fingered) Brown.

Since 1935, when he turned the tables for the first time, Hubbell has enjoyed a pronounced margin over the lanky Cardinal right-hander. The masterful triumph of the Giants' southpaw yesterday over his foremost hurling rival was his fourth straight and his fifth in their last six duels.

Eleventh-Inning Single Deals Browns 5th Loss in a Row.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 21.—After failing dismally with the bases loaded two innings earlier, Bill Dickey slapped a single with two outs in the eleventh inning today to drive in the winning run as the Yankees topped the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 3.

The hero of the game, however, was Lou Gehrig who snapped out of his hitting slump with three for three, a double, single and his third homer of the season with a mate on base in the first.

Boston, May 21 (AP).—Youthful George Coffman, making his big-league debut with the Detroit Tigers, today pitched his teammates to an 11-inning 4-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Westren Netmen Win.

Western High routed St. Alban's, 7 to 2, yesterday for its sixth tennis victory in eight starts. The matches were played at St. Alban's.

Feller Will Rest On Trip to East

Manager Steve O'Neill announced here yesterday that Bob Feller, the Cleveland Indians' youthful strikeout king, would do no further pitching on the club's current Eastern trip which ends May 27.

O'Neill's announcement came after Feller reported his "$1,000,000" right arm felt weak and that some trace of soreness remained.

The Iowa youth has made only one appearance since he suffered the injury in his first American League start of the season at Cleveland April 24. Against the Boston Red Sox Tuesday in a relief role he walked a batter on five pitches and was replaced immediately.

Reds Crack Losing Streak To Beat Phils

Move Ahead of Foes to Seventh Place With 6-5 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 21.—The Cincinnati Reds snapped out of a three-game losing streak today to defeat Philadelphia, 6 to 5, and move ahead of the Phillies into seventh place in the National League.

The Phils loaded the bases in the ninth, but could not score. A pinch single by Catcher Virgil Davis in the eighth inning following Ernie Lombardi's third double of the game enabled Billy Myers, running for Lombardi, to score the winning run.

The real break for the Reds came in the seventh when with two men on base the Phillies' third baseman, Gene Corbett, made a wild throw to second in trying to force Kampouris on Scarsella's pinch sacrifice. Gelbert and Kampouris scampered across the plate to be followed by Scarsella a moment later when outfielder Ival Goodman banged out his second double of the day.

Hagerstown Feature Won By Cora Key

Long Shot Dashes In to Pay $44.90 Mutuel in Big Day.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, May 21.—Cora Kay, away from the winner's circle since last September, regained her best form suddenly today and romped off with the Colonial Purse, a 6½-furlong contest that featured the program at this track. The 5-year-old daughter of Mayne supplied her backers with a $44.90 mutuel, while bounding down to the finish line a length and a half in advance of Veritas, another long shot. Third money in the limited field of eight went to Bromide, which, with Shanteb, drew the bulk of the betting.

The track continued to do a land-office business with a crowd of 6,000 in a betting mood. The weather, just as it has been since the meeting began, was perfect.

With the break, Bromide seemed on his way to make good for his supporters. From the outside post position the gelding swung over to the rail to get to the front of a determined Veritas. Cora Kay, under the handling of Leon Garrett, was far back and finding her racing legs at the time.

With two furlongs to go, Bromide began to quit and bear out at the same time. He interfered somewhat with Veritas, but the latter finally drew clear. In the meanwhile Garrett was whipping Cora Kay into real action, and the mare came to the outside with a rush. Through the stretch she gradually disposed of her rival to win going away.

Cora Kay's time of 1.22 1-5 was creditable for the course.

For the fourth straight day, the daily double provided a telephone number payoff. The lucky ones today were those who liked the chances of Tell It in the first race and Beauty B in the second and invested $2. They collected $166.

Tell It was a $9.40 mutuel in his own right and Beauty B., ridden by Garrett, provided a $38 reward. Both won by decisive margins.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo, the half-mile and Charlestown saddle champion, was suspended for three days after the second race. He was accused of cutting over sharply and knocking the filly, Isle o' Joy, out of the running. Palumbo finished second with his mount, Sun Belle.

Jim Moss, an ancient gelding, proved sprightly enough to take the measure of seven others in the third race. He won by eight lengths and caused the displaying of a $13.60 mutuel. Easter Herald made good for the favorite players in the fourth event, getting home a length and a half in front of Top Shell. He paid a $4.30 mutuel.

JIM MOSS, allowed to race on own courage to the backstretch, improved his position sharply to take a good lead and was being eased up at the end. CANTERET saved ground while yielding the pace to LILTEEN and SPEAR and finished courageously. LILTEEN set a good pace, but TRYON did not ride her out at the finish.

EASTER HERALD, saving ground and out of trouble during the early running, was steadied along when headed by TOP SHELL and rallied to drive to win, drawing away. TOP SHELL was hard ridden throughout, but was tiring at the end. GRAND BAKER closed a gap. LADY BUCK stumbled and interfered with STAND BY. The latter was going well when blocked.

FIFTH RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Colonial Hotel. For 3-year-olds and upward, foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:35. CORA KAY, allowed to settle into her best stride, was sent to the outside for racing room, rallied sharply to drive and was going away at the end. VERITAS, rushed up to contest BROMIDE for the lead, was bothered by the latter and came gamely at the bear out and was tiring at the finish. HARD CHASE showed a good effort. HANDLEY was through early. CORNWALLIS ran out of the course.

SIXTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:08½. Winner, Mrs. G. E. BENGAY, rated for a turn of the course while closest to the pace of GENTLEMAN, took command when called upon and was kept to a drive to the end. FLAGEOLET, pulled up sharply when PASS went down, made up much ground and was probably best. GENTLEMAN saved ground while setting the pace and tired gradually in the final three furlongs. LIGHT ACTION closed gamely. PASS fell at the first turn.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:48. Off at 5:52½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARDOR, $12.70, $4.80, $3.80; FIFE, $3.20, $2.80; DASH IN, $6.20.

ARDOR, well handled, ran SNOW COAT into submission and, placed to severe punishment, lasted to stave off closing bid of FIFE. The latter, timidly ridden, came with good courage when placed to drive and was wearing down the winner. DASH IN went forwardly and closed gamely. BAY WRACK went evenly. SNOW COAT stopped.

Heavy Selling Drives Wheat Prices Down

May Deliveries Weakest in Face of Impending Deliveries.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 21.—Heavy selling attributed to Eastern sources and looked upon as closing out of accounts of May holders, tumbled wheat down almost 4 cents late today.

The fall of values was chiefly in May wheat and was more or less associated with notices given of intentions to deliver 700,000 bushels on Chicago May contracts tomorrow. These notices were generally construed as indicating recognition of unlikelihood of any sharp new price upturns for old crop supplies of wheat before May 26, when trading in the current month's delivery will virtually be ended.

At the close, notwithstanding Chicago, wheat futures were ½@3¾ under yesterday's finish, May, 1.28¼@1.28⅜; July, 1.20⅝@1.20¾; September, 1.19@1.19⅛. Corn, ⅛ off to 1½ up, May, 1.33½; July, 1.19⅜@1.19½; September, 1.09⅜@1.09½. Oats, ½ lower to ¼ higher, May, 51½. Rye varying from ¾ decline to ⅝ advance, May, 1.17. Provisions closed unchanged to a setback of 37 cents.

The total compares with 10,638,000 bales produced in 1935. The yield of lint cotton per acre was 197.9 pounds, compared with 186.3 in 1935.

The area in cultivation July 1 last year was 30,960,000 acres, compared with 27,883,000 on that date in 1935, and the area picked was 30,028,000 acres, compared with 27,335,000 acres in 1935.

The reduction from a full yield per acre during the 1936 season from various causes was reported to have been 38.5 per cent of a normal, or full, yield, compared with 36.8 per cent for 1935, and 42.6 per cent for 1934. Losses from specified causes were:

Stocks Close Irregularly Higher in Dull Trading; Wheat Prices Decline.

New York, May 21.—Stocks were tired from their exertions of the previous day, which nevertheless had been light, and in a reduced turnover of around three-quarters of a million shares could look no better than irregularly higher. Foreign exchanges were little changed. July wheat at 102¼ cents a bushel was down ⅛ of a cent.

Trade news at the week-end is of no great importance. Railroad freight car loadings for last week turn out to have risen slightly over those for the preceding week, and a large gain was maintained over a year ago. While some worrying is being done over the possible extent of an expected summer recession in business, the tendency among most observers is to feel that no damage will be felt.

On the financial side the week has brought no increase in credit use, but another large addition, $25,000,000, was made to the monetary gold stock. Brokers' loans declined a little, as was natural with the chipping on one of the margin accounts and the weakness of prices in many sections during the period covered. Little change in other loans was made and money in circulation fell a little. Excess reserves of member banks, the Federal Reserve Board reported, dropped $30,000,000 in the last week.

Cause for Worry.

Gold holdings in this country are now less than $100,000,000 of the twelve billion mark. At the recent rate that milestone will be passed in another month, at which time the gold stock will be almost double the total currency in circulation. Probably no serious consideration will be given—for a while—to the idea of putting the country on a gold currency basis; but something will need to be done before long to solve the gold importation problem.

It is difficult to see how the Administration will dare to cut the gold price, and it is also difficult to follow the happy-go-lucky policy of supposing that no action need be taken, but that incoming gold can be indefinitely sterilized, no matter how high such an operation forces the public debt. Until a correct solution to the problem is reached and proclaimed, gold will be a subject for market uneasiness.

Security prices moved as though conservative elements were for the moment in the ascendancy. While Government bonds hardened, after several days of weakness, stocks lost their urge to advance. Apparently the short covering that helped to bring about the rally yesterday and the day before was easily exhausted.

Opening prices were unchanged to fractionally higher, but after the first few minutes of trading the old complaint of anemia attacked the market. Most of the day was spent in dull dealings with a tendency for prices to fall a little, but the early gains gave the majority of stocks a brighter look at the close.

Erratic Price Movements.

Steel shares were mixed. Steel common held fractionally under the previous close and made no further serious bid for par. Inland, Republic and Youngstown moved up a point. Rails gave up fractions. Santa Fe lost more than a point and Northern Pacific steeled back. Ontario & Western, in bankruptcy, declined further. Firm to fractionally higher prices were the rule for the chemical, amusement, utility and mail order stocks.

Midland Steel Products and Liquid Carbonic were helped by earnings statements. They were among a few issues to move up on light dealings. Others were Brown Shoe, Amerada, Celotex, Cluett-Peabody, Oliver Farm Equipment and Underwood. Homestake, soon to be split eight for one, rose more than a dozen points almost to 400, before settling back. The week's gain in the stock amounted to around 50 points.

Graham-Paige, the most active stock on the board yesterday, was quiet. Yellow Truck was nicely backed. Checker Cab dropped more than 2 points to a new low price on 2⅞ points on the next sale. Cerro de Pasco set other metal shares a good example, which they did not follow, in rising 2 points.

Money for Speculation.

Evidence given by Pierre du Pont in the Government's tax proceedings will be read with interest by those who insist that it would be a good thing if stock trading were put upon a strictly cash basis. The banks were blamed heartily for promoting the boom in stocks in the late twenties by pouring billions of money into brokers' hands. It was a profitable business for the banks, but as Mr. du Pont has shown, capital always will be found to supply a need when the price is high enough. More than one individual in those days lent directly on call to brokers many millions of dollars, and many a corporation lent still larger sums.

Week's Financing Lowest This Year

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 21 (AP).—New financing the past week shrank to the smallest total this year as underwriters waited for a more favorable market for public offerings. A compilation by Poor's Publishing Co. today showed a total of $14,916,000 compared with $36,600,645 the preceding week and $34,704,650 in the comparable week last year. About half the total was municipal, amounting to $7,885,000 against $30,640,000 in the 1936 week.

B. & O. Diesel Ends Long Run

New York, May 22.—Moving into the Jersey City terminals of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad shortly after dawn this morning was the latest and finest Diesel-electric locomotive ever to run east of the Mississippi River. Although Diesel-electrics of comparable size and power have for some months been making the run from Chicago to the Pacific Coast, the run of this engine over the B & O line marked the completion of regularly-scheduled Diesel electric operation between the Alantic and the Pacific.

The Diesel came in at the head end of a heavy Pullman car train bringing passengers from points on the B & O as far west as Chicago and St. Louis, and from Western and Southwestern connections. The engine's first lap on the B & O began Thursday as an easy test run from Chicago to Washington, no effort being made to develop its capacity.

Both are payable June 30 to stock of record June 15. The company paid an extra dividend of 10 cents a share on March 31.

Politics Rule Prospects for Summer Trade

New Legislation Expected for Wages, Hours and Child Labor.

New York, May 21.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Political developments over the next month or two will doubtless play a very important part in shaping sentiment and in clarifying the outlook for business later in the year. Aside from the enactment of a few comparatively minor measures, Congress has accomplished very little since the court reform program was announced several months ago. Even with indications that the President will compromise on his original court program, a long session is in prospect, with and in the perpetuity of its institutions may well ponder what that means. Ordinarily, the workers who engage in strikes are reluctantly forced to do so because of the economic and industrial oppression imposed upon them by hostile employers of labor.

CIO Supported By Communists, Green Charges

"They strike for the redress of economic and industrial wrongs. They strike for higher wages, for improved conditions of employment, for better homes, for a more equitable distribution of the earnings of industry, and for the realization and enjoyment of a larger, fuller and freer life under the regime of a democratic government.

"But in this article we are told by implication at least, that these objectives are subordinate, and that the strikes are a part of a class struggle—and they mention the proletariat in connection with this class struggle. In other words, it means the dictatorship of the proletariat and the furtherance of the revolution. * * *"

Says Reds Back Strikes.

"No one can doubt the meaning of the terms used by this special correspondent in the United States who reported to his superiors in Soviet Russia upon the support the Communist Party extended to the Committee for Industrial Organization, and of the part the Communist Party is playing in the promotion of strikes as part of the class struggle.

"What does the special correspondent of the Soviet publication Pravda mean when he says the success of the C. I. O. movement is of great political significance? What political significance is referred to? Does he mean political significance which may be attached to some political movement in which the Communist political organization will play an important part?"

After his denunciation of the C. I. O., Green turned to praise of the American Federation of Labor, which, he said, is "what its name implies . . . American in the full meaning of that term."

Since the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner act, he went on, "a new spirit of organization arose within the ranks of labor and has gone sweeping across the country ever since." The A. F. L., Green asserted, "has made great strides forward" and is adding thousands of members daily.

Cites "Sacred Pledge."

These recruits, he said, "are being educated as to the new responsibilities imposed upon them and upon organized labor," in particular "the fact that contracts negotiated through collective bargaining are backed by a pledge of sacred honor calling for the utmost respect and observance."

Green traced the progress of the Wagner act, claimed for the A. F. L. the inclusion of the NRA's famed section 7A on collective bargaining, and said his organization brought the cases which resulted in validation of the Wagner act by the Supreme Court.

"Labor unions within the ranks of the American Federation of Labor have served America's wage-earners for nearly six decades," he concluded.

"Under the leadership of the federation, union progress can take workers forward, but to be fully successful, it needs the active participation and unstinted co-operation of every wage-earner in the United States."

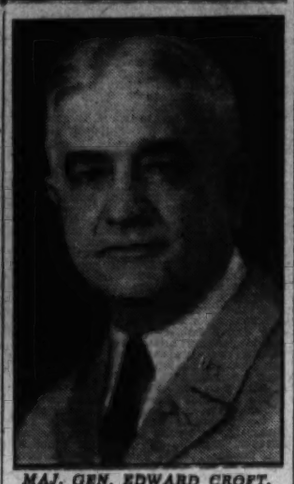
Maj. Gen. Croft Will Retire From Army Post on Oct. 31

Term of Infantry Chief Scheduled to Expire on Monday.



MAJ. GEN. EDWARD CROFT.

Maj. Gen. Edward Croft, Chief of Infantry, United States Army, will retire October 31, on his own application, after more than 39 years of military service. His term as Chief of Infantry expires Monday, when he will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch.

A native of Greenville, S. C., he was graduated from the South Carolina Military Academy in 1896 and appointed as second lieutenant of infantry two years later. His service has been largely in the Philippines and in continental United States.

After two months in Puerto Rico, Croft sailed for the Philippines in 1899, taking part in more than a dozen engagements. Returning to the United States, he saw service on the West Coast and at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., going back to the Philippines in 1905. After duty in Illinois and Massachusetts, he served on border patrol duty along the Mexican border, sailing for France in June, 1917, where he commanded the Second Battalion, Twenty-sixth Infantry, A. E. F.

Following the World War, his duty included service at Camp Meade School of the Line and later the General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth and the Army War College here. From 1928 to 1932 he was Assistant Chief of Staff, Operations and Training Division, War Department General Staff. He took command of the Tenth Infantry at Fort Thomas, Ky., in 1933, becoming Chief of Infantry four years ago. For his services he was awarded the Silver Star and Purple Heart.

Cooper Renews Fight to Regain Control of Bank

In the capacity of majority stockholder of the closed United States Savings Bank, Col. Wade H. Cooper, militant former president of three Washington banks, yesterday petitioned the United States Court of Appeals to recall its mandate of July 20, 1936, and order the Treasury Department to restore the bank to its stockholders.

Basing his appeal on alleged errors during the trial of the case in District Court and on the discovery of new evidence which he claimed tended to show the bank was solvent and should not have been closed, Col. Cooper, who at one time headed the Commercial National Bank, the Continental Trust Co., and the United States Savings Bank, asserted the depositors could have been paid in full a year ago.

He said that as of September, 1934, cash receipts of the bank from some of its assets showed a balance of $1,801,229.15 at a time when 65 per cent of the claims against the bank had been met. Payment of the remaining claims would have left a balance of some $818,175.66 he said. Last March, with outstanding claims of $376,282.83, Col. Cooper charged the financial statement of the receiver showed a balance of more than $781,000.

The action yesterday was taken by Col. Cooper after lower court rulings had blocked him in his efforts to regain possession of the bank. If the Appellate Court will not reverse its ruling, it was asked in the alternative, to permit the filing of a new suit asking for the objectives of the original suit, which was filed years ago.

New NRA Bill Awaits Speech By Roosevelt

the undertaking gave an idea of its chief provisions.

Introduction of the measure may bring about abandonment of the Ellenbogen bill to create a "little NRA" for the textile industry. Hearings on the measure have been held in the past two weeks by a subcommittee headed by Representative Kent Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, and decision on what course to pursue probably will be reached at a meeting next week.

Members of the textile industry have objected to being singled out for regulation in a one-industry bill, but have indicated they might be more agreeable to general legislation taking in all industries in interstate commerce. In the course of the textile bill hearings, Chairman Keller has expressed his belief that a "national standard of hours and wages" soon would be put into effect.

Can Adjust Standards.

The commission set-up in the Connery bill is understood to be given authority to adjust standards for various industries. The matter of permitting excess hours of employment in seasonal industries, such as canning plants, has been cared for. Time and one-half is to be paid for all excess time, it is understood.

Green said later "the question now is what form the legislation will take and how far we can go on minimum wages for men. Banning child labor and providing minimum wages for women offer no disagreement," he indicated.

Meanwhile, Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, named Senators Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado; Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, and White (Republican), of Maine, to formulate separate child labor legislation as a compromise. Some members of the Senate favor banning from interstate commerce goods produced in factories employing children, while others would forbid shipment of goods produced by children into a State in violation of its own laws.

McNutt Alters Toast's Order For Philippines

Issues 'Ukase' Because He's Honored Last at Parties.

(in a very indelicate manner, many thought) put to the foreign consuls in Manila, after he attended a consular banquet at which President Quezon was toasted first and himself second.

Propounds New Order.

Henceforth, McNutt said in a letter to the foreign diplomats, they would have to drink first to the health of President Roosevelt, second to the health of himself and lastly to the health of President Quezon.

In Manila, a Filipino-owned newspaper, the Herald, reported that a "diplomatic crisis is brewing" and that Commonwealth officials might decline to attend consular parties if McNutt was to lay down rules for toasts.

On the banks of the Wabash and the Potomac, everything was comparatively quiet, unless you counted the humming of the "Governor General's Song."

Technically Correct.

Protocol experts said that McNutt was correct when he insisted that President Roosevelt and himself took precedence over President Quezon. That order, they said, would continue until 1945, when the Philippines come into complete independence.

Though realizing the incident may offend the proud and sensitive Filipinos, Washington generally was inclined to class it with such teapot tempests as the Dolly Gann-Alice Longworth battle over precedence, Al Smith's outburst over whether the Roosevelts had or had not invited him to the White House, and the dispute as to whether Wallis Warfield will or will not be called "Her Highness."

A simple solution of the Manila precedence problem, it was suggested, would be to cut out toasts altogether and stick to serious drinking.

But it was apparent from cable dispatches that the foreign consuls in Manila didn't look upon the incident as trivial at all. McNutt, according to a United Press dispatch, not only laid down a batting order for toasts, but said that all official communications to the Philippine Commonwealth should be addressed to him directly instead of President Quezon.

Meanwhile the Associated Press reported that the office of McNutt would neither confirm or deny reports that he had advised foreign consuls to give his office precedence over the Philippine president in public toasts.

Deny Receiving Advice.

Several foreign consuls denied receiving any such advice from McNutt, who was not available for comment.

The German Consul denied he had made any expression whatsoever on a letter which Wayne Coy, McNutt's chief representative, sent to all foreign consuls instructing them to route foreign relation matters through the commissioner's office.

Previously, it had been reported the German Consul planned to send all such matters to Malacanan Palace, residence of the president.

Some observers expressed belief the entire matter might be the outgrowth of a campaign by the Philippine-owned Herald to force a clear definition of the high commissioner's powers.

The "Governor General's Song," mentioned at the outset, was written by a naval officer, the late Capt. Lyman A. Cotton, U. S. N., and is sung at every "wallow" of the Military Order of the Carabao, along with "Little Brown Brother" and other favorites.

The story behind it, according to Col. Joseph M. Heller, lead and wheel of the Carabao, was this:

The senior Gen. MacArthur was Governor of the Philippines. He had certain ideas about how to run his job and how to treat Aguinaldo, the wily hero of the Filipinos. But Washington had other ideas, and one of them concerned the treatment of Aguinaldo.

"Am I the Governor General or a hobo?"

True account or legend, that line led Capt. Cotton to dash off his rollicking song, which now, 37 years later, is revived out of season by a quarrel over toasts.

AAA in Denial Of Vandenberg Racket Charge

Michigan Senator Asked to Help Clear Up 'Irregularities.'

By Russell Smith.

A check for $24.43 which Pat Heeney, of Shiawassee County, Mich., received early this year, yesterday became a bone of contention between one of the giant Federal departments and a United States Senator.

Taking a cue, perhaps from the Social Secrity Board, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration invited Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, to assist in cleansing the payment of soil benefits of "technical irregularities" such as it had found in the Heeney case.

AAA Questions.

The AAA furthermore posed three questions to the Senator which the agency desired he would answer because they "are fundamental to a fair appraisal of the entire farm program," suggesting again the Vandenberg-Security Board teamwork in a survey now being conducted of amendments to the security act.

These questions were:

"Should the program be so planned as to give aid only to the farmers who have been exploiting their soil or should it recognize the farmers who have been treating their soil right and encourage them to go on doing so?

"Do you believe that the program as a whole, either in its planning or its operation, should be judged on the basis of the attitude toward it of a few gentlemen farmers, whose principal occupation is not farming?

"Do you believe the democratic system of local control and administration of the program by the farmers should be continued or should it be handled from Washington on a completely centralized and regimented basis?"

A Sour Note.

This request for co-operation concluded on a slightly sour note, however, for H. R. Tolley, AAA administrator, who wrote the letter, said that, in view of Vandenberg's votes against the soil conservation and AAA programs, "you obviously are not in sympathy with the farmers' program."

"We believe," Tolley added, after suggesting Vandenberg consult Michigan farmers as to their view of the program, "they will be shocked to learn that any phase whatsoever of this great co-operative effort of theirs to save the Nation's soil—the first that has ever been made on a national scale—has been called a racket."

Heeney Enters.

The innocent cause of these pyrotechnics, Pat Heeney, of Shiawasse County, Mich., was brought into the matter May 13, when Vandenberg, in a Senate speech, said that the owner of the farm which Heeney works as a tenant had written him, the Senator, that "we signed no papers last fall or at any time."

"Nothing was done on the farm except what had been done always," the owner, the Rev. Harry B. Lewis, of Columbus, Ohio, also was quoted by Vandenberg as saying.

Tolley denied both of these charges. He said Heeney "did participate in the program, did modify his farming practice * * * and did make formal application for payment." Heeney's application, agreeing to reduce acreage of soil-depleting crops and a statement, signed May 15, 1937, from Heeney "that he participated in the program in good faith," are on file with the AAA.

Cites Irregularity.

However, Tolley went on, there is a "technical irregularity" so far as Lewis, the complaining landlord, is concerned. The signatures of both Lewis and Heeney, he said, are in a different hand from the purported signature of Lewis to an application which was also required from him before the benefit payment could be made.

"The evidence of Mr. Lewis' name having been filled in by some other person is fairly clear, but there is no reason to believe that anyone has been guilty of fraud with a motive of enriching himself," Tolley added. He said an investigation of this is being conducted.

Not only did Tolley thank Vandenberg for "assisting to disclose this error," but he said, "we most earnestly urge you to supply to the department any and all information, including names in every instance in which you have any reason to believe that irregularities have existed in administration of the AAA program."

Names Sought.

If Vandenberg will "suupply actual names," immediate investigations will be made "and the facts will be given to the Senate without delay," Tolley pledged.

He did not refer to the case of a Sikeston (Mo.) farmer which Vandenberg cited in a later Senate speech. Vandenberg said this farmer claimed to have been paid benefits in October, 1936, just prior to election, for signing an acre-reduction agreement applicable during the season already ended.

Aides of Wallace at his press conference this week said no AAA checks were sent to Missouri in October.

Colored Man Hurt In Evading Arrest

Shot when he attempted to evade arrest early yesterday, Clarence Ferguson, colored, 27, of Brickyard, Md., was in a serious condition last night at Gallinger Hospital with a wound in his neck.

When he attempted to wrestle from the grasp of Policeman Myril T. Clark, of the Fourth Precinct, who, with Policeman Lawrence Halstead, same precinct, had seen Ferguson and two companions alight from an allegedly stolen car, he was shot when Clark's pistol was discharged, police said. The shooting took place at Second and G streets southwest about 3 a. m.

The other two occupants of the car, Eugene Martin, 24, and Melvin Johnson, 19, both colored, and of the 1800 block of Corcoran street northwest, submitted to arrest.

Hansen was named to the Narcotic Bureau in 1928. Before that he was an inspector attached to the California Board of Pharmacy and before that had been a policeman at Fresno, Calif.

Hansen, who is 58, had been assigned to investigate the "dope" traffic in Reno. Formerly he had worked in the Los Angeles and Seattle districts.

Officials here said McAvoy had made a written statement tending to incriminate Hansen. They said the investigators had observed the agent meeting McAvoy.

Three places were raided at Reno, but narcotics were found at only one, the Public Club, it was stated. Before the raids more than $1,000 worth of illegal drugs had been purchased in nine transactions.

The raid on the Public Club was made after the McAllister girl had purchased $195 worth of opium at the club with marked money, it was stated. The money was found on Sing after his arrest, officials declared.

Miss McAllister went to Reno "just for a visit" last December. She acknowledged she had been working with sheriff's officers for nearly six months, the Associated Press reported.

"I watched young people of about 18 years of age buy drugs," she related.

"Through the sheriff's office and the Federal Narcotics Bureau in Washington I was provided with funds for my investigation and I personally purchased more than $1,000 worth of drugs."

Sheriff Ray Root, of Washoe County, said Miss McAllister had served a jail sentence here last winter on a charge of passing a worthless check.

All local officers said they knew nothing of her previous identity.

Labor Captures Steel Election, Renews Drive

Leaders Study Plans to Obtain Contracts for 200,000 Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 21.—Steel labor leaders, jubilant over their victory in the Nation's greatest Government-supervised employe election, reviewed their plan to day for bringing approximately 200,000 additional mill workers under terms of collective bargaining contracts.

Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee presented an exclusive bargaining contract to the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation to complete the results of yesterday's election affecting the company's 27,000 workers.

Of 24,412 ballots cast in the mills at Pittsburgh and nearby Aliquippa, 17,412 voted for the steel union to represent the men, 7,207 opposed the union, 31 were blank, 56 void and 90 challenged.

Murray said he would meet Monday with Chairman H. E. Lewis of the corporation for the signing of the contract to which the corporation agreed if the union obtained a majority.

The steel workers committee, spearhead of John L. Lewis' drive to bring the country's 570,000 steel workers into one big industrial union, prepared for showdowns next week with two of five other major steel producers and for an election at the mills of another company.

Murray said he was confident a majority of the 4,000 employes of the Sharon Steel Co. would vote for exclusive union representation in Labor Board-supervised balloting at Sharon, Pa., Tuesday.

He will receive Monday the answer of Chairman F. B. Hufnagel, of the Crucible Steel Corporation to the union's request for a collective bargaining contract affecting union members among Crucible's 18,000 employes.

Regional Director Van A. Bittner, of the committee, will confer Tuesday in Chicago with officials of the Inland Steel Corporation, which employs 11,000 men in the Chicago area.

Other independents included in Murray's recent "sign or strike" threat were Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and Bethlehem Steel.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Piano recital by Norman Frauenheim in Pierce Hall Friday evening. Program: Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Andante with Variations in F minor (Haydn), "Hark, Hark, the Lark" and "The Erlking" (Schubert-Liszt), "Papillons" (Schumann), Nocturne in C minor, Waltz in C sharp minor, Polonaise in E flat minor, Etude in G flat major (Chopin), "Le Vent dans La Plaine" and "La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin" (Debussy), "Liebestod" (Wagner-Liszt).

In his only local recital of the season, Norman Frauenheim demonstrated again last evening his eminence among resident pianists. He was in sure command of his technical resources and in the vein for both bravura and poetic performance, and since he is an artist capable of projecting his personality, his readings were consistently interesting.

His dynamic forcefulness came to the fore at once in Liszt's transcription of the Bach prelude and fugue in A minor, to which he gave a virile voicing, and again in a highly dramatic version of Schubert's "Der Erlkoenig" as transformed by Liszt. Between those sonorous works, he placed the quieter passages of the Haydn variations in F minor and the exultant lyricism of Schubert's "Hark, Hark, the Lark."

Most enjoyable of all the romantic numbers on the program was the imaginative disclosure of the whims of Schumann in "Papillons." This is a work which requires in its interpreter a sympathy with the fanciful and an understanding of the composer's temperament. These qualities of insight Mr. Frauenheim possesses, and his reading of the sketches was instinct with poesy and humor.

The Chopin group had its most engrossing moments in the C minor nocturne and the E flat minor polonaise, both of which were played with power and evocatory zeal. The vitality of the readings was pronounced, and the dramatic implications were eloquently expressed.

Daylight Saving Plan Gains Favor, Sponsor Declares

A favorable report on the bill to move Washington clocks up an hour this summer was forecast yesterday by its author, Representative Sacks (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, chairman of a sub-committee handling it.

Sacks said that votes for daylight saving time have continued to pour in since a public hearing was held last Monday. He now has 20,000 affirmative votes, which is a ratio of 10 to 1.

Although the preponderance of testimony at the hearing was against the bill, the chairman said the sub-committee must consider the votes of those who were unable to attend the hearing.

10,000 Youths Parade Today For Auto Safety

Schoolboy Patrolmen Meet Bankhead, Bob Feller; to Stay 2 Days.

An estimated 10,600 schoolboy patrolmen—representing 20 States and the District—will parade down Constitution avenue in the name of highway safety today.

Assembled by the American Automobile Association, the youthful traffic sentinels received a Congressional welcome on Capitol Hill yesterday and last night gathered in the Labor Department auditorium for an enthusiastic safety demonstration.

During their two-day stay, the young patrolmen—boys and girls alike—will discuss with A. A. A. officials means of solving their local problems and making safety patrols across the country more efficient and helpful.

Cheering lustily and banked ten deep on stairs at the Senate side of the Capitol yesterday, the youngsters were welcomed by Speaker Bankhead and various Senators and Representatives.

"The gathering here today of the school safety patrols, which perform the great humanitarian activity of protecting the lives and safety of their schoolmates, is a most inspiring and instructive spectacle," said Bankhead.

"I hope when you return home you will carry with you recollections and inspirations derived from your visit to the Nation's Capital."

They were impressed with their impotrance in the field of traffic safety and urged to "keep up the good work."

A message of encouragement from President Roosevelt was read at last night's conference and following a general discussion of highway problems in the vicinities of schools, the delegates were given an opportunity to meet Bob Feller, 18-year-old pitching star of the Cleveland Baseball Club.

Soviet Pole-Sitters to Dwell In Fur-Lined Hut for a Year

Home for Four Scientists Only 10 Feet Long and 7 Wide; Group to Observe Weather Data Day and Night While Dog Watches for Bears.

By the Associated Press.

Tenants of this portable, fur-lined domicile are the Soviet scientists, Ivan Papanin, Ernest Krenkel, Pyotr Shirsov and Eugene Federov.

They arrived last night in a Soviet expedition headed by Prof. Schmidt, and were so sure they would arrive that Papanin left behind a complete description of his new home and a detailed list of its contents.

First, it is 10 feet long and 6 feet 9½ inches across, a little undersize for the normal four-person house.

It is black in order to distinguish it from its 1,000-mile front yard of gleaming ice, and it has windows made of a transparent plastic substance developed in the Soviet Union.

Overall it weighs only a little over 352 pounds. This is so it can be moved from the path of cracking ice.

"Preparations for the expedition began last February," Papanin, leader of the four, said in the interview, released this morning.

"The ice-breaker Rusanoff took fuel and a heavy cargo of scientific equipment to Rudolph," he said. "We took clothing and fuel for 18 months and we have a powerful wireless station powered with a windmill and storage batteries."

And without a doubt they have the most inviting larder in the Arctic Circle. They took along concentrated chicken meat from 5,000 chickens. They have concentrated eggs and milk and sausage. In all, they have some 48 different kinds of food, all of a rich caloric value.

The clothing is a little out of the ordinary, too. They'll wear shirts of reindeer fur, wolf fur stockings and fur trousers, and under all this, of course, woolen underwear.

"We'll organize for day and night duty," Papanin said, "in order to keep constant scientific readings and watch for ice-jamming.

"Hourly meteorological readings will be made. This will be difficult, but we want to obtain the fullest scientific data about the central part of the Arctic Ocean."
